The Democratic Tariff revision bill passed the Secute on the 9th by a vote of 46 to 27. The bill passed by a larger majority of votes than was anticipated, all of which gues to show the firm grasp which President Wilson has upon the situation. President Wilson is an organizer; ne is proving himself a strong man and is thereby securing the confidence of the people who are beginning to believe that he is able to find a safe way out of any difficulty. The differences between the house and the senate in regard to the bill will undoubtedly be settled this week and the bill will at once become a law after

The action of the above mentioned senators can mean but one thing and that is; that they consider that the democrats are doing for the people in a large measure what the republican party promised, but failed to do. If Veg., they did not consider the hill a progressive measure and for the benefit of the people they most certainly would never have voted for it. In fact it was necessary for them to vote for the bill if they were to remain true to their principles, all of which tends to show that the democratic party of today is indeed the progressive party.
