FRIDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1913.

No contracts for next year in either the American or the National Basketball League will be signed with players who do not agree not to use intoxicating liquors in the course of the season.

The brewers' own figures show that prohibition does prohibit, for in license states the per capita consumption of beer is about twenty-five gallons, in prohibition states it is only one gallon.

The membership in total abstinence societies in Germany increased from 245,037 in 1912 to 332,458 in 1913, a gain of 87,421. Over a thousand Roman Catholic priests are among the number.

The word comes from Dresden that a woman, Frau Boehl, has invented a powder which, when exploded in shells used in war, will put to sleep all the soldier enemies near it. The explosive stuff emits a gas which stupifies for several hours all who inhale it. The Prussians are making actual tests of the narcotic mixture, and if it proves effective the next war may be a matched sleeping combat.

In spite of President Wilson's optimistic view, as expressed in his message, that the waiting attitude of the United States in regard to Mexico will see Huerta eliminated and constitutional government restored to that unhappy country, war clouds continue to loom ominously in the horizon. The dictator Huerta continues as bold and defiant as ever; and only two days after the president read his message, the lower house of our congress by unanimous vote passed an emergency bill authorizing the president to raise a volunteer military force "in time of actual or threatening war." This bill was introduced by Mr. Hay, chairman of the committee on military affairs; and when it was passed Mr. Mann the Republican leader, declared that war between the United States and Mexico is inevitable and that the president is making arrangements accordingly—a prophecy that went unchallenged by the Democratic majority. It is true that when this bill was passed the outlook pointed to the early downfall of the Huerta regime before the revolutionists, without outside interference. But after Huerta is eliminated, what? Is anything or anybody more desirable to take his place? The revolutionists seem hopelessly divided under rival leaders, each with the consuming ambition to be at the top. In the north the Constitutionalists, as they call themselves, were at first united in support of Carranza; but Villa, his leading "general" (until lately a bandit chief of the mountains), has had his head turned by his successes, and aspires to be "El." In the south the "Zapatistas" insist that their leader, Gen. Zapata, shall be president. So it goes. The excesses and savagery the wholesale slaughter and vengeful spirit, of all parties, would seem to make any new regime as impossible of recognition and approval by the United States as Huerta. It is a distressing, deplorable, dark situation. Yet President Wilson's attitude of "watchful waiting" appears to be the best possible. This country can only watch developments—and be prepared for them.

LEGUMES PLOWED UNDER SUPPLY MUCH NITROGEN.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Ore., Dec. 18th, 1913. "A heavy crop of vetch or crimson clover turned under as a green manure affords more nitrogenous matter than the same amount of stable manure," said Professor H. D. Scudler, agronomist of the Oregon Agricultural College. "The green crop is likewise more free from disease germs and weed seed than the stable product. It is cheaper, too, if the cost of labor is considered. And its effects in producing acids in the soil are but little greater than those of stable manure.

"The acid effects, whether caused by the stable manure or the green manure, may call for the use of lime. Certain it is that if lime is to be used it may well be used in connection with the green manure. The present prices of quick lime make its use almost prohibitive, but it ought to be possible to secure ground limestone at reasonable prices in the near future. There are mountains of limestone in Southern Oregon, and it is hoped that companies will be organized to grind the rock and put the product on the market in time for next season's crops. Ordinarily not more than $3 per ton can be paid for ground limestone, if it is a profitable investment. But the acid-forming action of green manures is not serious enough to deter us from using these great soil builders, while awaiting a lime supply.

"The crop to be used as green manure should have grown to a height of 20 inches or more, and should yield not less than ten tons to the acre. It must be turned under early in April and thoroughly chopped up and incorporated with the soil by disking, both before and after plowing, if the best results are to be obtained. Otherwise it decays slowly, releases its plant food too late, and dries out the soil. It should be followed by cultivated crops, such as potatoes, corn, roots, etc., as they secure the highest values from either green or stable manure, being what may be called gross feeders.

"The actual fertilizing value of ten tons of crimson clover or vetch, green weight, is shown by analysis to be about as follows: Nitrogen 150 pounds, phosphorus 20 pounds, and potassium 120 pounds. The value of nitrogen is $24 and the value of all the fertilizers contained in the crop is $32, at fertilizer prices in eastern markets.

There is enough nitrogen in the ten tons of clover, or vetch, green weight, to produce 100 bushels of wheat, 1800 bushels of apples, 9,000 pounds of beef, 10,000 pounds of pork, or 130,000 pounds of butter. The fertilizing effects extend through a long period of years. Aside from the plant food value, the green manure has highly beneficial effects on the soil.
