TUESDAY JANUARY 6, 1914.

Yes Bro. Baker we agree with you that the home merchant should patronize the home printer and all home industries, and that the home merchant should be patronized by all. We also believe that the home newspapers should stand by its citizens in preference to outside paving combines.

We wonder if Bro. Baker would be able to see the rut holes in the pavement on Third Street if he were to put himself out enough to make some investigations. He no doubt has the "blind staggers" whenever he takes a walk on the street in question and is unable to see only the apparently good pavement on that street.

The heavy rains of the past few weeks have demonstrated the contention of the citizens who have held that our pavement would not stand wet weather. Agents for the Warren Construction Co. told us that the coating of sand was put on to protect it from excessive rains. The citizens have always contended that the top coating would not stand rain and that it was put there to cover up defects. Time is proving the citizens' contentions in every particular.

Those who may have doubts in regard to the present condition of the pavement should take a walk along Third Street towards the depot and note the dozens of places where the top surface has worn and washed away leaving the foundation rock unprotected from the wear and tear of traffic. In fact there are several places where the pavement is breaking through and where deep ruts are already forming which simply means that by spring Third Street will be a succession of ruts and bumps. Another large spot at the intersection opposite the Masonic building is breaking through. The condition of the pavement is about the same all over town, especially where there is any traffic to speak of.

A few months ago the Warren Construction Co., could have settled with our people for fifty cents on the dollar, but from the present appearance of things we believe that twenty-five cents on the dollar would be too much.

On Monday evening Mayor Beals and the new council took their oath of office and were installed. It was quite evident from the general appearance of things that we have a set of officials who will look closely to the city's interests, the council being made up of men who have had much experience in the business activities of our city for some time past, and who have an enviable reputation as being men of honor and integrity.

The mayor's message which we give on another page is a very interesting document, viewed in the light of present local conditions. A careful perusal of it convinces us that Mayor Beals has gone to a great deal of pains and effort in presenting to the council and citizens of Tillamook an explanation of our present financial condition, and recommendations that will be of great importance and benefit to the city should they be carried out. Every statement and recommendation which Mayor Beals has made, has been made only after the most exhaustive and careful study of the situation, with but one idea in view, viz: the benefit and welfare of our city; and for that reason we feel that every citizen should give his message marked consideration, studying it thoroughly with the idea of putting into effect the many good things contained in the message and thereby take advantage of the good work the mayor has already done in mapping out the year's work. Ordinances will have to be passed; and important amendments to the city charter will have to be made if we are to take full advantage of the mayor's timely recommendations. This work should be done this year, while the people are alive to the situation. Time passes quickly and unless we get busy at once and thresh the thing out without unnecessary delay we are liable to get luke warm and let the matter go by default, leaving matters in such a state that should we at some future time be governed by a careless administration, we would again find ourselves involved in serious entanglements and litigations. For instance should our council desire to pave our streets with diamonds, it could do so, and the abutting property owners would be powerless. One does not have to have a great amount of sense to understand that this is radically wrong. However, our charter now gives the council that authority, and for that reason an amendment should be made to the charter taking that power from the council.

The mayor's message is very plain and easily understood, and for that reason a lengthy comment on our part would be rather superfluous. Every statement made can be relied upon in every detail, and every recommendation advanced is most timely and for the best interests of our city. It is easy to see that we now have an able man at the head of our city government who is desirous of giving us his very best efforts, and for that reason we should be alive to our own interests by getting behind him to a man and helping the good work along.

THE FUTURE

From Oregonian of Jan. 2nd:
As the year 1913 drew to a close the business world grew more cheerful. There was a decided improvement in the tone of comment at the close of the last week as compared with the one preceding. For example, in the New York Evening Post's financial articles from various cities, published on December 27 we find such expressions as these:

London—More end-of-the-year optimism is visible this week on the markets than seemed possible a few weeks ago. General opinion now seems to favor easier money in the near future, and perhaps a very considerable relaxation of the tension.
The moment the currency bill, amended by the Senate caucus, went to the conference committee and was agreed on, Stock Exchange prices burst into an enthusiastic rise, and that large body of opinion, which habitually bases its own conclusions on the verdict of the stock market, at once began to applaud the bill.

An eminent financier remarked this week that the attitude taken by the Government towards corporations, and the evidence that the party now in power is capable of sound and constructive financial legislation, were incidents which supersede all other considerations in the general situation.
Boston—These closing days of 1913 are giving birth to a certain degree of hope and courage in financial circles, and in business circles also, which provides interesting contrast to the deep gloom and pessimism which has prevailed for many weeks and months past.

Pittsburg—There is no question but that the iron and steel trade outlook has measurably brightened in the past ten days.

Kansas City—Wheat conditions are high, being practically perfect over a large portion of the wheat belt of the Southwest, and if the next eight weeks maintain this condition, trade will feel an impetus all through the interior. The interior is ready to take part in trade revival at any time conditions seem suitable.
London Statist—There are immense balances standing to the credit of the United States in Europe, and the United States, therefore, has it in its power to take gold.

The prevalent tone is optimism at every center of finance. Steel prices after a long decline, are stiffening. Woolen mills are putting idle machinery to work. Stocks of cotton goods are so low that the mills expect large orders when stock-taking is completed. That sums up the manufacturing conditions and justifies the statement that the tide has begun to turn in favor of industrial activity.

Most important is the changed attitude of big business toward the Administration and the better defined attitude of the administration toward big business. Business men agree that the Administration has proved by the currency law its capacity for sound, constructive legislation. President Wilson's declaration of his purpose "to build up business on a sound basis," taken in conjunction with the voluntary dissolution of the telephone trust, is understood to mean war not on big business in general but only on bad business. He has thus calmed fear of the forthcoming anti-trust bills. Public opinion is becoming favorable to higher freight rates and Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty has indicated readiness to heed this opinion.

With every business and political portent forecasting a prosperous new year, there is every reason to meet 1914 with a smile of hope and confidence.
