TUESDAY FEBRUARY 10, 1914.

The passage to the Senate of the Alaska railway bill, by a vote of 45 to 15, marks an important step toward the principal of government ownership of utilities. The bill authorizes the president to expend $40,000,000 in building or buying 1,000 miles of railroad in Alaska, to extend from tide-water to the interior, and thus open up the vast mineral and timber wealth of the territory now inaccessible. The Guggenheims have started some railroad building, but whether they can be bought out at reasonable figures, remains to be seen. Government construction will insure railroad facilities for the development of Alaska's resources on a basis of equal opportunity for all, instead of the monopoly which private ownership involves. It is an interesting experiment. The large vote by which the measure passed the senate points to its enactment by the house. The Alaska people are delighted at the prospect. The bill provides for a redemption fund into which shall be paid 75 per cent of all moneys derived from the sale of public lands in Alaska, or the lease of mineral contents thereof. Machinery utilized in the construction of the Panama canal is made available for the construction work.

A vein of dire pessimism ran through the Headlight's editorial column last week. Among other things which seemed to give him a severe attack of "belly ache," was his sincere (?) concern over the reduction of the tariff on dairy and other products of Oregon. Out of all the papers published in different parts of the state, that come to our exchange table, there is only one real "calamity howler" and that paper is the Headlight. Of course it must not be forgotten that the Headlight has lost a postoffice but recently.

With butter selling at from 70 to 75c per roll, Bro. Baker "howls," and with cheese selling for more money than it has ever sold for before, Bro. Baker "howls" and "yowls" some more. Many of our people can look back to the Republican administration days of but a few years ago and remember when butter and cheese sold for far less than they are now selling for during these days of Democratic tariff reduction times. However, regardless of this fact, Bro. Baker seems to be in a continual fit of despondency, with, apparently, the question ever rising in his mind: When will I ever get another whack at the postoffice?

Never mind Bro. Baker, it will be many a long day before a hide bound, pessimistic stand patter like yourself will ever get another chance at the post office, so you might as well, for once, get in the band wagon and be a real booster. Think of the millions of dollars that have been set aside for river and harbor improvements in Oregon for the year 1914; think of the millions of dollars that have been set aside for railroad improvements in this state this year; think of the increased activity in every branch of the lumber industry, with the immediate prospects thousands of men have for good jobs. Think of these big, encouraging things instead of allowing your mind to be centered on, and riveted to, a little thing like a postoffice, that is here today, there tomorrow, and no one knows where the next day. Cheer up! Old man, cheer up!

Mr. Baker makes mention of butter and cheese as being on the free list, when it is a fact that they are protected by a duty of from 2 1/2 to 3 cents per pound. Bro. Baker knows this to be a fact. He is simply up to one of his usual tactics, viz.: to mislead the people by falsifying. However, when we stop to think of his record during the past year, the Warren Construction Co., etc., we are not at all surprised, for any man must be of strong character to overcome the influences of associates.

Alcohol Not a Stimulant

time on a rotating drum covered with carbon paper. On the record obtained in this manner the time required in writing a set of characters can be computed with an error of less than one two-hundredth of a second. The unit of time in which the trials were based was called a 'zeta' and corresponded to one one-hundredth of a second.

"The daily exercises began at 8 A. M. The subject's hand was connected with the apparatus, and the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, were written twice with pencil at top speed. Then the sequence reversed—10, 9, 8, 7, 6, etc.—was twice written; then the German letters 'inn,' also twice. These were repeated ten times, and the total average time consumed by each man was measured. Then he received his allotment of wine, as with the ergograph experiments.

"After five minutes they resumed their writing, carrying out their appointed task in scribbling as before—and proved that, while the spirit was willing, the flesh, and its controlling nerve pulses, was weakened; for they had, every man of them, measurably slowed up. The degree of retardation, after writing 1 to 10 under the influence of the small amount of alcohol administered (about what the ordinary drinker would take with his dinner), amounted to 5.6-10 per cent. In writing 10 to 1 the retardation was greater, amounting to seven per cent. This was accounted for by the increasing complexity of the stunt, it being a more novel combination than the straight progression of numbers. With the 'inn' the deviation from normal was even more apparent, averaging 7.3-10 per cent. Again and again these same general results were secured; the new crews were used for each demonstration.

"Similar results followed in the coordination tests, where the subject was required to 'snap down' a telegraphic switch at the unexpected flash of a light or sound of a gong, the time elapsing between flashing the light or striking the gong and closing the switch being measured by the 'zeta' chronometer. In every case the rapidity of the coordinating responses was decreased from 6 to 8.3-10 per cent.

"Next, a number of accountants of all grades were selected, and their average ability to add one-figure columns was estimated for one week. They were then given daily, in divided doses, the equivalent of three and a half cups of claret. A marked and progressive diminution in their output was noticed, beginning with 3.1-10 per cent the first day. After two weeks of this steady, moderate alcoholic allowance the percentage increased to 15.3-10.

"Similar experiments were then tried on typesetters. These were required to set type from printed pages (to insure absolute uniformity of copy), and the total number of ems a week was computed for a week. Then, with daily gentlemanly drinks, they lost an average of 9.6-10 per cent in efficiency by the end of the week.

"Perhaps the most convincing observation was concerned in the free 'association of ideas.' This, when the condition is raised to the fourth dimension, causes the party of the first part to forget his watch and chain, the number of the house in which he lives, and his wife's first name. He is then in a state for which the vulgar have a variety of picturesque names. The scientist call it 'alcoholic inhibition,' and he can usually define the gradients with precision.

"However, we are now considering alcoholic inhibition in embryo—before it grows up and develops, as it were—and the various methods employed in classifying its general characteristics. To illustrate: if the name of an object is spoken, immediately one thinks of something in connection with that object. Professor Kraepelin's subjects were requested to write these down, enumerating as many associated objects as occurred to them in the space of five minutes. Two words were given out at each session, five minutes being allotted to each subject. This was repeated at intervals during the day for ten days, and the average number of suggested things reckoned up. Then each evening preceding the next ten days a generous 'nightcap' was donated, and the results of the following ten days' 'association' computed. A loss in coordinating power in this series amounted to as high as 27 per cent.

This, Dr. Bowers thinks, was a remarkably convincing demonstration, and proves conclusively that one who drinks much is living only a small part of his normal life. It and Dr. Kraepelin's other tests tend to show that the alleged "stimulant" powers of alcohol are a delusion pure and simple.

The Distance Between WHEELER And Nehalem City

Is less than 2 miles. Between these two towns there is more traffic than between any other two towns in the county located but that distance apart.

Yet to drive a team from Wheeler to Nehalem you would have to drive over 10 miles around through the valley.

A wagon road between the towns of Wheeler and Nehalem should be built at once and thus eliminate the waste of time and money occasioned by forcing traffic over a 10 mile haul instead of over a two mile haul.

We believe work should be started on this project at once.
