Lincoln Day Observed.

The bright weather of the last few days has aroused feeling as of Spring among the students, not that they are any lazier than usual but that the laziness is more manifest. Blood begins to stir ever so little, perhaps, but it lives there is no doubt and a look that speaks of excursions and hikes comes into the eye and a broad yawn (hidden from view, of course) shows that things are alive and awakening and will soon be moving.

Beginning last week the Seniors and Juniors started to have their pictures taken. This sudden craze for their likenesses upon paper has a sensible cause and a reasonable explanation. The Juniors desire the pictures for the annual and Dr. Monk has kindly consented to take all the pictures and prepare one from which a cut can be made, to show his goodwill toward the school and his sympathy with the work the Juniors will be doing in advertising the school. The students are all grateful to him for his liberality and show their appreciation not only by being grateful but by giving him their patronage.

Last Thursday was the anniversary of Lincoln's Birthday which the State School laws say is a school holiday except that some appropriate exercises should be held during the day. The exercises here were held in a few minutes of singing of patriotic songs and then school work began again. The students did not think that much like a school holiday so during the morning a plan for gaining the remainder of the day as it was meant to be, was formulated. At noon the School Board was interviewed and the consent of its members procured for the holiday and then in a body the students waited upon Prof. Buchanan to obtain his sanction to the move. He evidently recognized the truth that "You can send a fool to college but you cannot make him think", at any rate he gracefully bowed to the "sovereign will of the students" backed by the School Board and the holiday was secured.

The afternoon was spent in playing basket ball at the Opera House. The Seniors defeated the Juniors 15 to 9 and the Juniors the Freshmen 14 to 6. The games will not count on the team's averages but Friday night, the 20th, there will be two games in dead earnest, Seniors vs Juniors and Juniors vs Freshmen (Second Teams.)

ODD FELLOWS TO DEDICATE ON THE 24TH.

On Tuesday, February 24th, the Odd Fellows will dedicate their fine new hall. The dedication day was set for early in January, but on account of the bad weather and tie up in transportation the event was postponed.

It is expected that Judge Ryan and Judge Galloway of Salem, both Grand Lodge officers, will be present and give addresses.

Mrs. Woodmans, president of the Rebecca Assembly is also expected to be present.

A fine banquet will be served and other special arrangements made for the entertainment of visitors.

Odd Fellows from all parts of the county will be present as well as many visitors from outside.

INJURED BY BEING THROWN BY HORSE

From Examiner:

Frank Crane the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crane who was seriously injured by being thrown from a horse near his parent's home on the Miami last week is slowly recovering from the injuries sustained. Young Crane mounted a horse at the home of his sister one day last week and started for home, in jumping a fence the horse threw him and Crane was picked from the ground in a serious condition. Dr. Wendt of Tillamook was called in attendance and for sometime it was feared he had received internal injuries that might result fatally. He rallied however and was able to be moved to his own home last Tuesday morning on a stretcher, and unless further unforeseen complications arise will be able to be out in the course of a few weeks.

THE LOGANBERRY.

Harvesting

In our last issue we began an article on the Loganberry taken from the Pacific Homestead and written by F. H. Brown, Field Assistant in Horticulture, O. A. C. The article is completed with this issue.

Proper methods of harvesting are the most important factors in the production of dried loganberries. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the manner of selecting and removing the berry from the cane for the appearance and quality of the dried berries depends very largely on the care with which they are harvested. Berries carefully harvested may through lack of care be spoiled in hauling, handling in the dryer, or even in the drying process itself. On the other hand, berries that have been crushed in the field make an inferior dried fruit even with the most careful methods in the dryer.

Berries that are still solid and very light colored should not be picked, for when dried they lose more weight and noticeably more sour than those left until they become dark red. These unripe berries are very plentiful during the early part of the season when the fruit is ripening slowly. The presence of this unripe fruit probably accounts for the fact that there is a greater loss through the drying process during the first part of the season than there is during the latter part. On the other hand, the berries should not be left until they become over-ripe and soft for they then lose their form, blacken more on the trays, and lose some of their weight by dripping. The best berry, then, for drying purposes is one that is fully matured, is dark colored, but not soft. If properly evaporated it will give a berry having its natural form, a good color, and will lose less weight in the drying process than those in other stages of ripeness.

The picking is done mostly by women, girls, and young boys who receive an average of one cent per pound for their work. While these pickers are for the most part entirely reliable there are some who work only to get as many baskets full as possible, consequently not picking with enough care and spoiling many berries. Growers will do well to give more personal attention to the picking. This will not only discourage hurried and careless picking but will encourage the conscientious picker to continue doing good work.

There are two principal causes of the berries being crushed by the pickers. First, the berry is pulled straight out from the stem; instead, it should receive a slight twist to one side which would be as quick and require much less pressure and in addition would prevent many stems from remaining on the berries. Second, too many berries are held in the hand at one time. This is a very serious fault with some pickers and should not be allowed. In such cases each berry is more or less bruised giving all the fruit in the carrier a mussy appearance and causing it to drip badly when trayed. Berries should be kept free from stems, flower parts, and broken leaves as they are very conspicuous in the dried fruit and detract much from its appearance.

The time of day for picking, while it has never received such attention, bears a greater relation to the finished product than is generally thought. It

On Your Own Account

Have you any money in the bank? A part of your earnings ought to be placed there, anyway. Everybody can afford to save something, however little. Have a bank account of your own and you will feel happier, better, more independent. Make your little money earn more, and so grow bigger. Better than hoarding it where fire or thieves can reach it. Your bank-book is a receipt and an evidence of your wise economy.
