HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Saturday the High School went on an all-day excursion to Bay Ocean. The party left the dock on the "Henriette," Captain Oliver, at seven o'clock. The tide was very low and as a consequence, just beyond the Long Jetty the boat grounded for twenty or thirty minutes. Bay Ocean was reached about nine o'clock and the crowd went up the beach to the Cape, but as some of them did, the rest stayed at Bay Ocean and thus the party was split which was a very lamentable thing when the excursion was a High School with the avowed intention of spending the day on the beach and not at an "indoor amusement" that could be enjoyed without the High School. When the crowd separate so did the lunch but both parties were able to eat, drink (coffee or water) and be merry.

The afternoon was spent in various ways, the most noticable of which was the way some of the girls enjoyed the luxuries of a sea bath without the proper paraphernalia. One girl in particular proved to a certainty that she was completely fascinated by the cold pressure of salt water, and she was properly dubbed the "sea nymph."

Later the lighthouse was visited. The tide was lost and the party took a short sojourn in the wilderness of Cape Meary Mountain before they found it again. It was no fault of anyone that the way was missed, for there was a great slide about two weeks ago that takes in an area of twenty acres and moves at the rate of about 6 feet a day. Many cracks in the ground appear over the hill and considerable clay and rocks have already caved off into the ocean. The waves for a hundred yards or more out are yellow with the clay that has slipped into the ocean.

When time for return had come, of course, some had not yet returned and the boat and everyone else waited while the delinquents approached, there was no surprise, however, when the before mentioned "sea nymph" and Eobeson appeared to be the delinquents, everybody knew was it was before they came. The return trip was uneventful and Tillamook was reached about six.

Arthur Wallace, a former student here and late of Ashland, began school last week.
