TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1914.

Following is a list of other great corporations. H. H. Wood, March, Chairman. It has been under consideration for some time. This is the first time that a bill of this kind has been introduced in the senate. It is hoped that everything of real importance that has been put into the bill will be allowed to stay there, but disapproved senators. Here other studies may prevent the bill from being passed. The senate shall have no right of approval or disapproval in the various fields of the bill. The federal courts will be referred what the bill has provided for the study of Senators. It is hoped that the bill will be passed in the senate. The bill is a masterpiece of research and comprehensive information about Alaska, its history and resources, and the necessity for the construction by the government of a railroad to open up the resources of the territory and enable the people of the Pacific coast to get at the rich stores of coal, copper, gold and other minerals in the interior. That this bill is to be built, says the senate in the effects of Senator Chamberlain than those of any other man save President Wilson.

It is believed that President Wilson will sign the Clayton Anti-trust bill if it reaches him with a provision exempting labor from prosecution under the Sherman act. Notice to this effect has been given to Representative Lewis of Maryland, spokesman of organized labor in the house. He has been informed that neither the administration nor the leader in congress can see their way clear to start the demand that the senate shall be made a privileged class under the anti-trust law. This is in keeping with the policy of the Democratic Party, viz. "Special privileges to none." The administration's policy is to sign the bill and cost the Democrats points every time they vote this bill. However, there is no special law that the senate taken is proper and life and still in the summing up of things add to the party's prestige.

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN BUSY

Washington, May 30.—The necessity of making every precautionary preparation that human judgment and experience can suggest for possible war, is adding very largely to the responsibility and anxiety of Senator Chamberlain in his capacity as chairman of the committee on military affairs.

Already one of the hardest worked men in congress, Senator Chamberlain has found that danger of war brought to light a number of things which he had not previously demanded corrective legislation. Even the usual preparation bill for the war department required that its preparation be made with an eye to usual conditions and extraordinary expenditures. There was the naval academy bill to scrutinize, prepare carefully and steer to its final passage on the floor of the senate. Still more important and of a peculiarly timely interest was the volunteer bill which gives the president a year to call on the states for the national guard. In case of foreign war the national guard will be called out first for border patrol and guard duty, then in case of need and when it has become somewhat seasoned by actual service conditions, it may be employed abroad. And volunteer, independent forces, will not be called until the regular army and the militia have been used as fully as possible.

But that is not telling all of the extra work that has devolved on Senator Chamberlain. As chairman of the military affairs committee, he had to devote a great deal of consideration to the details of war, which had stood so long without revision as to need careful consideration. There was also the fortification bill, to which the senate gave a great deal of careful study.

New to any person living even a cursory acquaintance with legislative work it would be evident that this responsibility in connection with the military affairs committee would be sufficient to test the strength and endurance of the average legislator who gave any time and thought to his own correspondence and the regular business of congress. But it looks like only an incidental part of Senator Chamberlain's duties.

It must be remembered that those senators who do not have heavy committee work think that two or three hours a day spent in dictating letters to their constituents, and in sitting some five or six hours in the senate, listening to the proceedings and occasionally taking part in them, think that they are working quite hard enough for the glory and honor of their country and their state. Few of the Democrats can do this, but there are Republicans who, it is admitted, are not overburdened now with committee work.

Returning to Senator Chamberlain, much of his time has necessarily been devoted to the agricultural appropriation bill. Many things in this bill appeal especially to Oregon. There are such things as soil survey, measuring stream flow, agricultural experiment station work, seed and plant introduction, combating insect pests and diseases of plants and animals, protection against frost, and many other features which, if left out or not properly provided for, would be of great detriment to Oregon's fruit and farming interests. All of these things Senator Chamberlain, with the zealous cooperation of Senator Harry Lane, has been watching with unflagging wakefulness.

At the present moment the federal government is under consideration by the committee on commerce, and it has been under consideration for some time. This is the first time that a bill of this kind has been introduced in the senate. It is hoped that everything of real importance that has been put into the bill will be allowed to stay there, but disapproved senators. Here other studies may prevent the bill from being passed. The senate shall have no right of approval or disapproval in the various fields of the bill. The federal courts will be referred what the bill has provided for the study of Senators. It is hoped that the bill will be passed in the senate. The bill is a masterpiece of research and comprehensive information about Alaska, its history and resources, and the necessity for the construction by the government of a railroad to open up the resources of the territory and enable the people of the Pacific coast to get at the rich stores of coal, copper, gold and other minerals in the interior. That this bill is to be built, says the senate in the effects of Senator Chamberlain than those of any other man save President Wilson.

When it is considered that Senator Chamberlain, in addition to being chairman of the committee on military affairs, belongs also to the committee on agriculture and forestry, irrigation, commerce, public lands and territories, it is really surprising to find that he is usually in his seat in the senate chamber when the senate is in session. He answers more roll calls, it is believed, than any other senator. The senator's "secret friends" have marveled all through this session at his powers of endurance and capacity for hard work. He has kept up well and, indeed, has declared that he has left exceedingly well during his press of business and, at times, lack of sleep. To those who may think him in some way overburdened, one round of enjoyment, based on several of his man's duties, may give him a very inadequate idea of what it really means to be a servant of the people in the upper house of congress.

PORTLAND LETTER

Portland, Ore., May 30.—(Special) pile drivers and other heavy machinery is to be used in a construction of the terminal docks for the Hill system and municipal docks at Astoria have been reserved by the contractors who will do the work and the first piles will be driven next Wednesday as a start for both projects.

The contractor has at least 100 men will be at work within the next ten days and that from start to finish the work will be pushed with all possible speed. The total cost of the first part of the Astoria Municipal Docks will be $2,000,000 and it is expected that it will take not less than 120 working days to complete the job.

The Port of Columbia Commercial Club has arranged to celebrate the beginning of work on the two dock systems by an old-fashioned basket picnic during the afternoon, speeches by prominent men and a banquet at Astoria in the evening. It is expected that prominent officials of the Hill system will be present and take an active part in the celebration.

The government dredge Oregon which has been operating in the Yaquina River for several months, has completed a channel from Toledo to the ocean and the first ocean-going steamer has been docked and loaded at that port.

The steamer Bandon, of San Francisco, loaded a cargo of 60,000 feet of lumber for the California city and will thereafter make regular trips between the two ports. It is estimated that the new channel through Yaquina Bay has put not less than 250 million feet of splendid lumber within easy reach of the ocean.

Each of the Willamette Valley counties included in the Willamette Valley Exposition Association, will specialize in some particular phase of exhibit. Clackamas and Washington counties will feature processing fruits and vegetables. Clatsop, Multnomah, Lane County, timber products. Linn County, fresh fruits and vegetables. Marion County, hops and canned and dried fruits and vegetables. It is planned while each county will specialize along these lines, no county will be barred from contributing good samples in other lines if they wish.

As a result of the interest which has been aroused in the raising of corn in Oregon, it is stated that over 2,000 acres of the cereal has been planted in the vicinity of Astoria. Most of the planting was done with carefully selected, acclimated seed, and as the growers are using the most modern methods in the cultivation, it is expected the yield will be the best ever turned out in the state. Over 30 corn cultivators were sold by Ontario merchants in one week.

At Amity, Marion County, there has just been received a herd of registered Holstein dairy stock, bought in Michigan, and said to be the best lot of dairy cattle in Oregon. The herd consists of 18 heifers and one registered bull. The mother of this bull is said to have a record of 900 pounds of butter fat in a single year. Cost of the herd, including transportation, amounted to $5,000.

Fellow Worker's Greeting:
The average worker, through profit, rent and interest, is exploited of four fifths of the product of his labor, hence is a slave, industrially.

The wife of the working man is the slave of a slave. The exorbitant, confiscatory taxes of Tillamook County places the dairyman in the same struggle for existence, as the toiler in the industrial centers.

Have you pride, spirit, or desire to be free? Come to this meeting and take part in working your emancipation.
