On Sunday the launch Arab, which docks at Garibaldi, made a trip out over the bar which might have resulted seriously. The engines stopped working after the bar had been crossed and it was necessary for Capt. Farley and his life savers to go out and take the passengers off the Arab and tow that boat into the bay. There were six passengers on board besides the crew. Dr. Tylersmith and son William of Sheridan were among the passengers.

C. E. Trombly spent Sunday with his family who are visiting Mrs. Trombly's parents the Rev. and Mrs. Ford of Cloverdale. On Sunday Rev. A picnic dinner was enjoyed and after the services the beach and other points of interest were visited. The day was one of profit and enjoyment.

While driving an auto near Oretown last Saturday Ted McKinley and a lady by the name of Stevens of Portland, who was with him, came near losing their lives by plunging over a grade. Mr. McKinley's auto bumped into another auto coming from an opposite direction and was about to topple over when he started it directly down the embankment and into a barbed wire fence. Mrs. Stevens breast was lacerated some and the auto's opped just in time to save her life, as a barbed wire was pressing against her throat and had the back of her neck forced securely against the back of the seat so that she could not move her head. Mr. McKinley threw his whole weight and strength against the wire and got her out before further wounds were inflicted. The end of one of Mr. McKinley's fingers was torn nearly off and the auto was damaged somewhat. Dr. George of Cloverdale was called to the scene and the travelers were soon on their way to Tillamook, thankful that they had been spared to tell the tale.

Eagle Feeding Young Filmed.

Klamath Falls—Perhaps the first motion picture of a bald eagle nesting and feeding her young has just been secured by a company engaged in filming bird and animal life in Klamath country. The film was taken from a pine tree 150 feet from the ground looking down into the nest in another three.

An Old Time Merman.

An amusing and detailed account of a merman seen in the Atlantic, written apparently in good faith, ends with the following description of the monster, which may possibly have been a seal or a sea lion. "That monster is about eight feet long, his skin is brown and tawny, without any scales, all his motions are like those of men, the eyes are a proportionable size, a little mouth, a large and flat nose, very white teeth, black hair and chin covered with a mossy beard, a sort of whiskers under the nose, the ears like those of men, fins between the fingers of his hands and feet like those of ducks. In a word he is a well shaped man. Which is certified to be true by Captain Oliver Morin and John Martin, pilot, and by the whole crew, consisting of two-and-thirty men." (An article from Brest in the "Memoirs of Trevoux." The monster was mentioned in the Gazette of Amsterdam Oct. 12, 1725, where, it is said, it was seen in the ocean in August of the same year.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

How to Read the Moon.

Few people can tell at a glance whether the moon is waxing or waning. Here is a whimsical rule to remember by. It is very simple to those who know Latin and is not difficult for those who do not. The first thing is to notice whether the moon is like a D or a C—that is, whether the full semicircular curve is on the right or the left. If the moon shows a D that naturally stands for "decrease." "It wanes."

But then comes in the great principle "The moon is always deceitful," and one has to understand the opposite of what the moon says, so that a moon which shows a D is a waxing moon, while a waning moon is like a C.

Those who have no Latin will no doubt look to see whether the moon says it is "decreasing," in which case they will understand that it is waxing, while a waning moon will deny that it is "decreasing."—New York Sun.

Cost of First Class Traveling.

While on the Pacific ocean I met a life insurance man who told me that he traveled constantly and that his expenses, about and ashore, averaged $11 a day. He kept no expense account, he said. At the end of the year he charged the company $11 a day for expenses, and that was almost exactly what he spent. I made a calculation and found that the present trip has cost us $11 a day each, almost to a penny.

If you want to know what traveling costs, here is an estimate you may depend upon. This means rapid traveling, by railroad and steamship, and sightseeing in the towns with the assistance of a guide. The estimate includes the purchases a traveler is compelled to make and cannot be reduced much unless you travel second class and deny yourself many things.—Ed W. Howe in His Travel Notes.

His Morning Duty.

Ministerial duties and increasing dignity have not robbed a certain minister of his cherished boyhood accomplishment of making fritters. He frequently exercises this skill at breakfast time, much to the delight of the younger members of the family. Edith, the four-year-old daughter, recently took tea with a member of the congregation. After the silent grace the little one, looking at her unmarried hostess, remarked with pity:

"You don't have any one to pray for you, do you?"

Said one of the ladies present, smiling:

"I suppose your papa prays for you three times a day."

"Oh, no, he doesn't," was the innocent and earnest answer. "He fries in the morning and prays in the afternoon."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Common Weakness.

An interesting light is thrown on the purely human side of the late Edward VII. of England by a story told of his inability to resist the temptation to appropriate a particularly good anecdote.

Some one told a delightful story to one of his majesty's young nieces. "That is capital," she said. "I must tell it to the king."

"No," she instantly added, "I won't, for if you tell uncle a good story he forgets in a day or two that it was told to him and goes about repeating it to every one as his own."

Information Wanted.

Simmons had returned from his vacation. "I certainly enjoyed the husking bees," he said to the young woman. "Were you ever in the country during the season of husking bees?"

"Husking bees!" exclaimed the girl. "How do you husk a bee, anyway. Mr. Simmons?"

Prophecy.

Small Boy (handing druggist half dollar)—Five five-cent cigars, and give me the change.

Druggist—But, Bob, your father always smokes ten cent cigars.

"Well, he isn't going to this time."—Life.

Her Bad Accident.

"Did you ever have a bad accident?" The lady chauffeur bit her lip.

"I met my husband by accident," she admitted.—Exchange.

Just Too Late.

"When did you learn that he was one of the bank's most trusted employees?"

"The day after he absconded with the funds."—Detroit Free Press.

Be at war with your vices, at peace with your neighbors and let every new year find you a better man.—Franklin.
