It contains no mercury or compound of mercury. There is nothing of a corrosive nature in its composition. It is a skin exfoliate in which the harmless and efficient whitening agent has been successfully incorporated. BRIEF WAR NEWS

The cessation of Russia's advance on Budapest and a renewed Austrian offensive in Bukovina combine to provide the most important war news of the week. The capture of Birlibaha pass, leading from southern Bukovina into Transylvania, and presenting the choice of two routes to Budapest, presumably was accomplished at the cost of leaving other passes insufficiently defended.

The Austrians have taken advantage of this condition, and are now back in the crownlands from which they were driven a fortnight ago. The effect of Austria's sudden success has undoubtedly exerted much influence on Roumania during the week. Special Austro-German emissaries arrived at Bucharest to persuade the Roumanian statesmen that it is against their material interests to enter the war. Russian troops, however, on Transylvanian soil were demonstrating the possibility that unless Roumania joined the conflict quickly, she would be too late to conquer Transylvania, with its Roumanian population, for herself. Probably at no time has Roumania been so near joining the allies as she was this week.

While matters were developing so precariously in Bukovina and Transylvania, the Russians began during the week a new offensive toward Thorn. Instead of concentrating on one objective, Petrograd returned to the policy of a divided forward movement. The result at least, produces a very peculiar strategic situation in Poland. With the Vistula between them, the Russians and Germans are moving along parallel lines in opposite directions, separated only by the half mile width of the river, which neither is able to cross. Toward the west, on the north bank of the river, the Russian advance post is 25 miles from the German entrenched frontier camp at Thorn; while on the Vistula's south bank, to the east, the Germans are 35 miles from Warsaw.

The German air raid on England was the most conspicuous occurrence of the week in the western war area. No military results of any importance were produced by the raid. A number of civilians were killed and injured, and the lives of non-combatants were again demonstrated to be as much a hazard under modern warfare as those of soldiers in the field.

In Alsace some territory was gained by the French toward Mulhausen during the week, but the Germans effectively checked the enemy's movement toward the Rhine. The entire valley of the river is retained by the imperial troops, while the French army is compelled to move in a northern direction instead of planting itself at any point along the coveted waterway.

Although official descriptions of fighting on the western front continue to be brief there is evidence that it is growing fiercer at many points. The Germans are showing renewed activity in the neighborhood of Ypres and heavy bombardments of the left wing of the allies are almost incessant.

Dunkirk has been singled out for German air attack, doubtless because it is believed it is being used by the British as a base of supplies from England, while Ostend, Bruges and Zeebrugge are receiving attention from the allies for a similar reason. There is no confirmation from official sources of the reported visit of the allies' airman to Essen and Düsseldorf early in the week.
