NOTES OF INTEREST.

Nathan Straus, the New York Jewish philanthropist, suggests a novel way to end the war. He would have the women of all nations band together and "walk about between the battling lines and appeal to them." Any one who "appeals" to Teuton militarists will be apt to get "appealed" to in the stomach or solar.

Theologians have lifted their eyebrows in dubious of their hands at Sharon, Mass., but the minister's wife, Miss Ingham, is vindicated. Public sentiment was with the defendant. Why should it not be? Honor is a woman's all, and to safeguard it she could, if necessary, either kill her employer or his friend.

With the approach of the agricultural season, [illegible] begin to [illegible] hens of single farm could [illegible] $6 million eggs, and [illegible] this year. [illegible] a problem [illegible]

Common shareholders of the United States Steel Corporation will receive no dividends until earnings improve, but the preferred continues to draw full pay in spite of [illegible] trade. To refrain from [illegible] wages when losing money is one of forbearance that labor will not forget.

The Philippines are capable of producing enough food and wealth to support comfortably 40,000,000 persons according to president Waters of the Kansas State Agricultural College. Where the islands now are [illegible] such a population they would of themselves make quite a nation.

THE LONGEST DISTANCE CONVERSATION.

At last they have held conversation across the American continent, a distance of 3,400 miles, through the long distance telephone. President Wilson at Washington, exchanging greetings with President Moore, of the Panama exposition at San Francisco. Well might the world take up the original exclamation of inventor Morse when he sent his first electric telegraph message: "What hath God wrought?"

The President's conversation was a sort of christening ceremony for the across the continents wire completed, newly perfected by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., and marked the opening of this remarkable utility to the public.

Thereafter it was added the period of talk with president Moore was [illegible] up from San Francisco to New York and thence to the White House. To Mr. Moore the President said:

"It appeals to the imagination to talk across the continent. It is a fine omen for the exposition that the first thing it undertook has been to send its voice over from sea to sea. I congratulate you on the fine prospects for a successful exposition. I am confidently hoping to take part in it after the adjournment of congress. May I not send my greetings to the management and to all whose work has made it possible, and made it the great event it promises to be, and convey my personal congratulations to you."

The receiver at San Francisco was then handed by Mr. Moore to Thomas A. Watson, who had been electrician and mechanician to Dr. Alexander Graham Bell at the time of the invention of the telephone and who in that capacity was the first person to hear a word spoken over a telephone. Dr. Bell, who was in New York, "listened in" on the president's conversation with Mr. Watson, and heard the president say:

"I consider it an honor to be able to express my admiration for the inventive genius and scientific knowledge that have made this possible, and my pride that the vital cord should have been stretched across America as a new symbol of our unity and our enterprise. Will you not convey my cordial congratulations to Mr. Bell in New York? And I want to convey to you my personal congratulations, Sir."

The President then addressed his remarks to Dr. Bell in New York, although they were plainly heard by him in San Francisco.

"May I not congratulate you very warmly on this notable consummation of your long labors and remarkable achievement? You are justified in feeling a great pride in what has been done. This is a memorable day and I convey to you my warm congratulations, Sir."

The president ended the ceremony with a telephone conversation with President Vail of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., and marked the opening of this remarkable utility to the public.

Submarine Mines.

Wet gun cotton in submarine mines is of course a very potent explosive, but in some respects it is quite outclassed by the compound used in German mines and known as trinitrotoluene, abbreviated to "T. N. T." in Great Britain and to "trotyl" in Germany. A shell, torpedo or mine loaded with T. N. T. which requires to be detonated by means of mercury fulminate sets with great violence into minute fragments whereas if loaded with picric acid the splinters are very small and cannot therefore do as much damage. Although wet gun cotton is more powerful if exploded in close proximity to the target, the effect of "T. N. T." is much greater when the explosion takes place some distance away.—London Telegraph.

The Steamer Duck.

Around the southern extremity of South America is to be found a very large duck, which bears the common name of "steamer duck" or "race horse," owing to a peculiar habit it has of rowing itself along the surface of the water at great speed. This is said to be due to the remarkable fact that the bird loses its power of flight when it reaches maturity. These ducks are very common.—Chicago Herald.

Artistic Excuse.

"There!" said Mr. Nagg after a complicated explanation of why he had stayed out so late; "I hope this is satisfactory."

"It is more than satisfactory," Mrs. Nagg told him. "It is simply beautiful." St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Her State of Mind.

Attorney—You can sue him for breach of promise, madam, but it seems to me that it's preposterous to claim $250,000 damages. Fair Client—I want to get so heavy a judgment against him that he'll just have to marry me—the scoundrel!—Chicago Tribune.

ENORMOUS CHEESE SHIPMENTS ABROAD

From Telegram:

United States cheese is in big demand for army use in England and thousands of pounds are shipped there every week, according to advices from New York. The result has been that good old American cheese of the country grocery and free lunch counter variety has come in for a boom through the war. Now the market, which had every sign last fall of going to pieces, has taken a new lease of life. English soldiers are said to be very fond of cheese as one of the army rations and this has resulted in heavy purchases in the United States of surplus stocks which threatened to glut the market.

To show the enormous quantity which England has been taking to meet her requirements, it is estimated that since last November the exports of cheese from the port of New York alone have amounted to 72,857 cases and taking 50 pounds as the average weight in each case, total shipped was 3,642,850 pounds. At an average price of 15½ cents a pound, the money value of the cheese would be $564,641. This does not take into consideration heavy shipments which have been going out via St. John, N. B., and Portland, Me. No cheese has been shipped from this port abroad during the season. It is said the shipments from St. John and Portland, Me., will total more than 50,000 boxes.

The upward trend in the Eastern cheese market started last November when it was discovered that England, which takes most of its cheese from Canada and New Zealand, would not have large enough supplies to go around and would be obliged to call on the United States to help her out. At that time there was a large amount of American cheese held in northern markets, which had been intended for the distributing centers of the South, but which the South did not buy owing to her depressed financial condition resulting from failure to market cotton crops.

These heavy European shipments further resulted in a big cut in the stocks sent here. As a general thing a large quantity of Eastern cheese comes to the local market each season, but this year receipts have been smaller than ever before. Our own cheese has had the call and still has.

Today's advices say that reports received in New York from all interior points as far west as Minneapolis state that heavy purchases have been made for export account. One line of 10 cars was brought in Chicago and about 20 cars have been purchased in Wisconsin within the last fortnight.

The exports of cheese from New York since May, 1914, have been 81,573 boxes against only 11,163 boxes the previous year. According to the Government figures the amount of cheese which went out of the United States last November was 709,131 pounds, valued at $112,535, which compared with 246,077 pounds during November, 1913, valued at $40,239.

FOREIGN.

Lu Cheng-Hsiang, China's ablest diplomat, has been appointed by president Yuan Shi Kai, minister for foreign affairs.

The Canadian parliment, which meets this week, will be asked to vote $50,000,000 more for the war fund, $100,000,000 having already been appropriated.

Another change has taken place in the Villa-Carranza situation. President Garza and Villa's troops fled on Wednesday of last week, and Carranza's forces entered a few hours later.

Col. Gothals now admits that the Panama canal will not be ready for the great naval review in March, and it has been postponed till July. President Wilson will therefore go to the Panama-Pacific exposition by rail.

Gen. Jesus Carranza, a brother of the presidential aspirant, with his son and all members of his staff have been executed by one of Zapata's officers. Still another candidate for president is being put forward, Gamboa, a cabinet minister under Huerta.

Another incident occurred on Tuesday last to embarrass the United States in our relations to the European war. The international railway bridge at St. Croix, New Brunswick, was dynamited by a German named Werner van Horn, who then escaped across the boarder to Vanceboro, Me. There he quietly submitted to arrest, but immediately declared himself a German officer, who after committing an act of war had escaped to a neutral country, and therefore could not legally be surrendered to the Canadian authorities, who at once demanded his extradition. No serious damage was done to the bridge, but the the international complications may prove serious.
