MY LONELY CABIN DOOR

The sun is slowly sinking
From my clearing in the dell,
And shadows of the evening come once more;

As I sit and watch the burning of
The logs upon the hill,
From the seat beside my lonely cabin door.

My thoughts they oft-times wander
From the clearing to the trail,
That leads down to the distant sandy shore;

And my heart is filled with gladness
When my lids with knapsacks filled—
Comes whistling to my lonely cabin door.

How I long to keep them with me,
To help me clear the hill
And listen to their stories o'er and o'er,
But they whisper to me softly
Pa, we've got to hit the trail,
And leave you by your lonely cabin door.

But my time will soon be over,
Then I'll hit the wandering trail
And gather with my loved ones as of yore;

And at night around the fireside,
They would listen, as I tell
Of the clearing 'round my lonely cabin door.—E. H. Best, Elmore Park.
