The men when arraigned before Judge Stanley pleaded not guilty and showed a permit to practice issued by the State veterinarian, which had not apparently been revoked. ## TOWN OF TIMBER BURNS.

Hillsboro, Ore., June 19—The town of Timber in the Coast range, between here and Tillamook on the railroad was entirely swept away by fire at 2:30 o'clock this morning, the origin of which is a mystery. The town consisted of two stores, a hotel and a hall a dozen residents, and the value of the property destroyed is variously estimated at from $20,000 to $30,000, with no insurance. No lives were lost.

The fire was discovered by the train crew of extra train No. 291 which arrived at Timber last night and stopped for the night. The crew headed by conductor Fisher and Engineer Clow, was awakened at 2:30 o'clock this morning by the fire and found that the flames were burning under the houses of the town, all located on a side hill. The roof of the depot was also burning. By the efforts of the train crew the occupants of the whole town were aroused and some of the groceries and provisions in the stores were saved. There were no facilities for fighting fire available and the little village was swept away. The depot lost its roof, but the rest of the building was saved and this is practically all there is left of Timber today.

Scientific Farming

PROFIT IN POULTRY.
A Quick Growing Crop That Furnishes Steady Returns.

There are few investments from which returns can be got as quickly as from poultry, says the editor of the Western Poultry Journal. In seven to eight months after setting the eggs the profit commences to come. In fact, something can be realized earlier than this, though the income may not exceed the outlay. The cockerels will be ready to sell as broilers at three months or less, and pay the pullets will come by laying.

There are not many things in the live stock line which bring in returns so quickly. While most grain crops will grow in a longer period, we can grow out one crop a year, and this may be justified by unfavorable season. But the chicken crop is not affected by weather conditions to any great extent and is a sure crop in the hands of the man who knows how to grow it.

Market ducks make a little quicker returns than laying hens, but the duck

Industry is confined to certain localities and is not proving as profitable as it once was. Under right conditions they are a never failing crop every three months. In 1913 the orange groves in a section of California were put out of commission by a severe freeze. This gave a great impetus to the poultry industry in that section, as the orchardists went to work to secure large flocks of layers to insure them an income until the orchards were again in bearing. White Leghorns are the fowls of that section, and they argued, and rightly, that they could buy baby chicks and have a large flock of layers bringing them in an income in six months.

I have known of several instances where parties establishing commercial apple orchards have used laying hens to produce the income and fertilize the land until the trees came into bearing. The poultry houses were set in the newly planted orchards, and both trees and hens were benefited by the presence of the other.

DAIRYING IN THE FAR WEST.

Many Sections Await Coming of Live Stock to Become Prosperous.
For several years the federal dairy division has been building up dairying in the far west, particularly in such sparsely settled regions as the reclamation projects, says the Country Gentleman. Independently of extension funds recently made available by the Smith-Lever bill, the division has succeeded in doubling and often in tripling the number of silos in such sections. Wherever alfalfa is grown in abundance, as on irrigated lands, the division has preached dairying as the logical industry to utilize this feed. With the Smith-Lever funds available experiment stations in the western states are co-operating with the federal department of agriculture in dairy extension projects.

There are many sections of the west that only await the coming of livestock to become prosperous. Cheap feeds, especially such roughage as alfalfa, are produced in abundance in the irrigated valleys. Often the price is so low that unless the hay is fed on the ranch it will be disposed of at a loss. Five dollars a ton for alfalfa delivered to the railroad has been a common price, while at the same time many growers claim they should have $8 or $10 a ton in order to make a profit. According to those figures the average crop requires the assistance of cows, hogs and sheep in order to return a profit.

Why Chicks Die in the Shell.
If eggs are to be held before sitting, they should be kept at a temperature of from 40 to 60 degrees and should be kept covered so the albumen will not evaporate. When the chick comes out of the shell it is made out of the albumen or white of the egg and has used little or none of the yolk. If the albumen has evaporated too much there is not enough material to build a chick large and strong enough to get out of the shell. This is one of the causes for chicks dying in the shell. This evaporation may take place either before or during incubation.—Western Poultry Journal.

Suckers on Fruit Trees.
The suckers or water sprouts that result from heavy pruning should not be removed until the second year, and then there will be some of them well placed and growing in right position to fill a vacancy here and there in lower zone of tree, and in two or three years be bearing fruit of some kind as tree provided it is a budded or low grafted tree—if not, it, too, may be grafted.
