The Dairy Industry.

The dairy industry of Tillamook County is at present its most important one. With the aid of Agricultural Agents it has been developed along profitable lines.

The county supports one cow testing association, which takes in the territories near Tillamook City and has 800 cows enrolled. The officers of the association are: W. E. Noyes, Pres.; Joe Dyer, Sec.

A Holstein Breeders Association has been organized with 25 members. W. E. Noyes being its president and Ben Kappeler its secretary.

The Jersey men have also organized a Jersey Breeders Association, with Will Hare, as its president and Wm. Williams, Secy.

The dairy cows of the county feed on green pasture nearly the year around. It has been demonstrated by actual test that our best dairy cows will keep a cow yielding 30 lbs. of milk per day for winter feed.

While we do not claim that our farmers are keeping a cow to the acre, we do say that it can be done, for it has actually been done on a small scale.

Some of our cows in the past have yielded a gross income of $100 in a year and thousands of them have yielded $100.

Our farmers are now getting better stock and it is only a question of time when our ranches will produce far more than they are now producing. The introduction of the silo is assisting many in solving the winter feeding problem.

The future of the dairy industry of Tillamook County looks very bright indeed and there is no good reason why it should not be doubled in the next few years.

Our Fishing Industry.

The fishing industry of Tillamook County is very important, the annual product reaching into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. When the season is good over 200 fishermen are employed on the different bays and rivers. The bays and rivers which afford good salmon fishing are: Nestucca Bay and river, where a good cannery is operated; Tillamook Bay and river, emptying into it where three canneries and two cold storage plants are operated; Nehalem Bay and river, where two canneries are operated.

The deep sea fishing is just being developed. Halibut and many other splendid specimens of deep sea foods are caught. As conditions demand it this wonderful supply of food stuffs will be developed commercially and will mean much wealth to this locality.

Berries and Small Fruits.

The loganberry is chief among our small fruits. This berry can be raised to great advantage on our hill lands, and has been known to produce an income of $100 per acre, net. Several of our farmers at Beaver have taken up the berry growing and have established an association there and built a dryer. They have been very successful this far and have found a ready market for their product.

Food Storage, of the Frank roof variety, took first prize at the state fair last year with a display of dried loganberries.

Blackberries and raspberries can also be grown in great abundance here.

Lumber Industry.

It is estimated that there are 30,000,000 board feet of timber in Tillamook county, including fir, cedar, hemlock and spruce. We have several mills in the county at present, but most of them are running for the home demand only, as soon as our markets are properly improved and we again have access to the markets of the world the lumber business of Tillamook County will take on large proportions.

Tillamook Clay Works.

Tillamook Clay Works, owned by the Krebs Bros. south of town is a very important industry for this county. A very good quality of tile is made and much of it is being used to tile our low lands. A very good quality of brick is being made at these works.

Tillamook Lime Products Co.

The Tillamook Lime Products Co., under the management of U. G. Jackson is now mining a fine deposit of lime stone on the C. W. Nelson place north of town. Much of this lime is being used on the land and is just what our people have needed since the opening up of this county. The deposit seems to be in a large body and will no doubt be of much benefit to the county in many ways.

Communication.

Editor Herald,

Dear Sir:—As you have always been an interesting listener to my apple troubles, I thought I would relate to you the rest. I have been experimenting for several years in an endeavor to find an apple worth raising in Tillamook County. Among my 30 different varieties I have found one perfect apple and three others which are a close second. So you see those people who always holler so loud to the effect that you cannot raise any good apples here, because it is Tillamook County will have to shut their mouths sometimes. I have about six kinds which have not born any fruit yet. There might at least be one good one among them. I will have to re-graft several of my trees as they have proven to be worthless. This gives me another backset for two or three years.

I have planted out at present 700 trees. There are in nursery rows 430 ready to go out this fall and I will complete the budding of about 1000 of next year work. So I expect to have a few apple trees some time. If the weather will hold that finding satisfactory substitutes some thing I can make something for in Paradise valley. I hope I can get some more in the future.

Now as to further details I am chiefly silent. I have been my own secretary without asking any body's aid and perhaps reap some reward sometime.

Very respectfully

L. Sauerbrey.

(Editor note: Sweet dwarf apple trees that were sold by Mr. Sauerbrey to different people in this locality have borne splendidly. Last week we were shown two trees in the garden of Frank Long, Sr., which had some fine apples on them. It looked strange indeed to see such small apple trees, loaded with such large fine apples. The bodies of these trees are no more than two inches thick, however, they are bearing apples which are now as large as any other apples.)

The Tillamook Bay Jetty.

Our government never expends a large sum of money without first considering well the object in view and the benefits to be derived by the government and especially the people most interested.

Then again, the government is generally considered slow to make large appropriations for the improvement of rivers and harbors or other natural waterways. Through the efforts of Jonathan Holman, who represented the state of Oregon in the national senate for six years, congress was made to see that with a deeper channel at the entrance to Tillamook Bay so that large sea going vessels could enter, the forty million feet of lumber back in the mountains would at once begin to move.

The lumber industry of Tillamook County's greatest assets. In 1912 government engineers were sent here to make investigations and place estimates upon the proposed improvements. They estimated that the improvements would cost over $800,000, but when bids were asked for, one was received from Gethrich & Joplin, Portland contractors for $400,000. There was much preliminary work in getting ready for such a large project, but the company made good progress and began driving piles April 22, 1914.

The contract with the government calls for approximately 400,000 tons of rock, and for 2,500 feet of jetty, 250 feet, 4875 feet have already been driven and at the end of the jetty the water stands at about 12 ft. at low tide. No piling have been driven since July 1st, the company waiting until the rock train catches up with its work. Work is progressing nicely now, 500 to 800 tons being delivered daily. The company was given three years time in which to finish their work and they expect to do it. About 90 per cent of the rock has been delivered, and by diverting the water as it is now, the engineers in charge of the work feel safe in saying that about 80 per cent of the efficiency has been accomplished. About 80 per cent of the trestle has been driven. There is about 14 feet of water on the bar at low tide and the channel is very well defined and in the proper place.

Government men are now at work in the bay making soundings to ascertain the depth of sand and what kind of material will have to be moved in dredging. A deep harbor here will mean much to Tillamook county, and the government seems now in earnest in its efforts to help us get what we have so long asked for. The cost of the jetty is not all borne by the government, for the timber lands adjacent to Tillamook Bay have to bear one half of the cost. The Port of Bay City has been very active in its efforts to secure the proper appropriations both at home and in congress. There are bright prospects ahead for the timber interests of the county, and especially the towns and cities on the bay, and these kind hopes will be realized just as soon as we can blast of a deep channel to the sea.

The government part of the work has been ably handled by Col. J. J. Morrow, United States Engineering Dept. at Portland, and W. S. Carroll, and Geo. W. Brant, government engineers who are stationed here and at Nehalem.

The rock for the jetty is taken from a quarry on the Miami river one mile above Miami, where Gethrich & Joplin have a modern plant. The company employs about 75 men and every arrangement is made for their accommodation and convenience. Samuel Woodward occupies the responsible position of book keeper and paymaster and John Gethrich is traffic manager and has charge of the employment bureau. The rock is transported on a jetty train which equipment is furnished by the government.
