

CHIROPRACTIC FOR THE CHILDREN

UPON the health of children today depends the health of the Nation tomorrow. Upon their shoulders will fall the burden of carrying on where mother and father left off.

The spine being the foundation, the controller and distributor of nervous impulses upon which the healthful action of every organ depends, the obligation upon the parent is to see that every child gets an analysis of its spinal condition from a competent Chiropractor. To do so will do no harm and may save the child from a lifetime of needless suffering and ill health. This is particularly urged if the child has shown symptoms of some weakness, such as susceptibility to coughs, colds, constipation, kidney, or stomach trouble. The functional vigor of the body depends upon a spine in order.

EMPIRE MILKING MACHINES

The Recognized Standard

NEARLY every field of endeavor has its recognized standard—one manufacturer's goods that always loom up first in your mind when a product of its nature is mentioned.

It's true of cameras, pianos, locks, crackers, speedometers, watches and a host of other products.

And it's true of Milking Machines.

Visit the homes of prize winning stock of all breeds, go to the dairy farms whose chief object is the production of large quantities of milk or go to the small farmer who has only a limited number of cows; everywhere you'll find the dominating milking machine to be the Empire.

Complete information from us will place you under no obligation. Come in to see us or ask us to come out to see you at once.

TURN CHURCH INTO 'CENTRAL'

Phone Workmen, Following Disaster at Pueblo, Colo., Use Odd Method

Time out of mind the church has been an asylum for the helpless and the suffering in times of disaster, but it remained for a church in Pueblo, Colo., in the first few hours of confusion following the last flood, to throw open its doors to a telephone company, so that a temporary switchboard might be established in its basement and the vitally necessary system of communication with the outside world might be re-established.

No sooner had the waters receded than the telephone men were on the ground seeking to restore service. The flood had ruined their central office equipment and they sought in vain to find another building in which to house the temporary headquarters. Then Rev. Frank E. Eden, pastor of the First Baptist church, came to their aid with an offer of the use of his building.

Teams of installers quickly transformed the basement of the church edifice into an up-to-date central office and for some time Pueblo's only means of communication by telephone was through a switchboard—probably the first in history—set up in a house of worship.

Telegraph instruments were also installed and during the period in which the church was put to this emergency use the pastor's sermons were accompanied by the click of Morse instruments and the low murmur of the voices of the telephone operators as they transformed into action the spirit of service which he preached.

GIVE UP CONTEST WITH SAND

Washington, Railroad. After Unsuccessful Fight, Move Their Tracks to Get Out of the Way.

After fighting night and day to keep their tracks free from windblown sand, two railroads running along the banks of the Columbia river, near Wallula, Washington, have given up the struggle and are soon to move their roadbeds to the top of the bluffs, out of reach of the sand. For months teams of horses and scrapers have struggled with the sand.

During the flood season the river deposits sand and silt on the Columbia's banks to a depth of from ten to fifteen feet, and as the water recedes the wind picks up this fine, rounded material and carries it over the surrounding country. On the farm of H. R. Ostrom a pen and shed filled with four hundred sheep were buried overnight, and a few branches bearing apples protruding from the surface of the sand-dune is all Eric Johnson can show for a forty-acre orchard. —Popular Science.

Growing Demand for Peanuts

Americans are eating peanuts in a number of ways. They eat peanuts straight, peanuts in many forms of candy, salted peanuts on the tables like salted almonds, peanut butter, peanut oil and peanut meal or flour. And all the possibilities of the peanut have not yet been realized by the public.

American farmers are not supplying the American demand for peanuts. Shelled peanuts by millions of pounds and peanut oil by millions of gallons come from China and Japanese possessions on the Asiatic continent, and Insular Japan grows peanuts for export and runs oil mills for crushing them. Kobe and Osaka, Japan, and Shanghai, China, are perhaps as great peanut markets as our own city of Petersburg in Virginia. India raises peanuts and Spain is a peanut exporting country.

The European taste is turning to peanuts and peanut products just as the American taste has turned already. The peanut has a great future.

One on the Parson.

A southern clergyman tells of an occasion when a friend of his had obtained a job for a colored man who had been for a long time out of work. The clergyman thought that the man must be getting pretty shabby, so he looked up a suit—they were much of a size—and took it around to the man's house.

The man's wife took it, and the clergyman waited in the room, as he says, "ready to be overwhelmed with thanks." But when the woman returned she said:

"My husband thanks you, sah, but he says that he don't hold with parson's clothes, but if you've got anything as would suit a man he'll be glad to have a look at it."

"You-All"

Prof. Annette B. Hopkins, of the English department at Goucher college, says that the only way to iron out sectional accents and colloquialisms is to get "you young and train 'em. If a student is not made aware of her peculiarities of speech before she is seventeen or eighteen, Professor Hopkins finds, it is usually too late for effecting permanent corrections. "To achieve a speaking vocabulary unpolluted by localisms," she said recently, "requires more than four years of college." Thus, at Goucher, "you-all" is a firmly established institution. —New York Evening Post.

SAYS MEN'S LOOKS IMPROVE

That Males of the Race Are Growing Handsomer Is Contention of British Surgeon.

According to Sir William Osler, the painter, men are growing more handsome every day, says the North China Herald.

That their faces are changing is a scientific fact, vouched for by Prof. Arthur Keith of the Royal College of Surgeons. In his annual report on the museum of the college he says:

"For many years past it has been the custom to accept and preserve in the museum all human remains found in Great Britain when they were found under such circumstances as gave an approximate clue to their date. In time, it is hoped, sufficient material will accumulate to provide a basis for a physical history of the inhabitants of these islands."

From the evidence accumulating under his care Professor Keith has become convinced that definite changes, particularly in the face and jaws, have been taking place in the last century or two.

Whether these changes are for the better Professor Keith does not say. But Sir William Osler was quite decided on the point.

"Of course we are growing more handsome," he said. "A firmer type, a stronger jaw is developing. I should say. Men are approximating more to what is known as the strong, silent type, so beloved of fiction."

"I believe you can make yourself like anything you like within limits. One of these limits is that you be like the people you live with, either in actual life or in the life of the mind."

"I have found that husbands grow like their wives, and wives grow like their husbands very frequently."

Sir William's theory perhaps may account for the fact that there is a type dentist, a type prize fighter, a type journalist, a type doctor, and so on.

PROFITABLE WELLS TO OWN

People Willing to Pay Liberally for Dip Into Water That Contains Radium Emanations.

A mighty profitable piece of property in these days is a radium well—the term referring to water that contains the precious "emanations" of that wonderful mineral. People are flocking to the Isle of Pines (south of Cuba) for "dips." On that island, at Santa Fe, are four radium wells that are alleged to be very remarkable. Not far away, at Santa Barbara, are eight more.

The wells are not much to look at—mere holes dug in the ground and surrounded by ring fences. There are hotels, which charge only $50 a day for room and board, with dips thrown in. Outsiders may have the treatment at $5 per dip.

The method is simple and rather primitive. A piece of canvas is spread on the ground; the patient sits in the middle of it and two muscular men lift the ends. Lowered into the water hole one is immersed for a moment or two only.

More would be too much. The heat might be dangerously affected. Even after so long a dip one body of a person thus immersed is almost as red as a boiled lobster. It gives one a notion of the strength of the emanations.

Women who take the dips are warned to avoid wearing their heads. The radium water turns the hair green.

Prospecting in Australia.

While the applications have been made for the prospect of $50,000 ($250,000) offered by the federal government for the discovery of oil in payable quantities in Australia, no definite indications of large deposits of oil have been made known, says a Melbourne dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor. In western Australia 50 samples from the supposed oil region in Kimberley have been forwarded for analysis to the geological department, and the minister for mines, J. Scaddan, says that some of the analyses gave evidence of mineral oil similar to that found in Sumatra. It was hoped that further investigation might lead to the discovery of oil.

REAL "PRESS AGENT STUFF"

Hard to Beat This Yarn Alleged to Have Been Put Out by P. T. Barnum's Expert.

The late Edgar Saltus, at a dinner he once gave in his beautiful New York apartment, talked about the press agent.

"The press agent of today," he said, "has a dull and feeble imagination beside the press agent of the past. How Barnum would have scorned the press agent of today!"

"Barnum, you know, had a good press agent. Take his press agent's story of the elephant, Alpha."

"Alpha fell ill—so the story ran—with gastritis. No medicines would relieve her. It was discovered that she had wrenched off an iron bar from her stall, and as the bar could not be found anywhere all saw that she had swallowed it. This bar was the cause of her acute gastric sufferings."

"Well, Mr. Barnum had a small colored lad named Rufe working for him. He sent for Rufe and said:

"Rufe, I want you to take a rubber tube to breathe through, and we'll put a strong rope around your waist, and then you must go down into Alpha's stomach after that iron bar she's swallowed. It's the only way to save her life."

"Little Rufe rolled his eyes in horror, but he knew Mr. Barnum. He knew he must obey."

"So he was well greased, and they gagged Alpha, and then they thrust him head first down the enormous oesophagus into the elephant's stomach."

"He soon found what he sought there; he gave three tugs on the rope, and they drew him out with the indigestible bar of iron clasped in his hand."

"It is superfluous to say in conclusion that Alpha's life was saved, and that brave little Rufe was handsomely rewarded by his generous employer."

The Future Men and Women

Will be what we make them through our care of the children of today—undernourished children cannot develop into vigorous alert men and women.

Neglect the boys and girls in their growing days, and we wrong them forever and beyond recall.

Milk, a quart or more for each child, daily, will assure prop mental and physical development for the standpoint of nourishment.
