MAN HE WAS LOOKING FOR

Old Goldstein Bigger Had Good Job for Burglar Who Had Been Boyhood Chum.

"Who's there?" This snappy question shot forth from the lips of Goldstein Bigger, owner of one of the finest offices near the Main street house.

"Only me," came the answer, and the burglar turned his lantern upon himself at once and on each side of him to show that he was telling the truth.

"You?" cried the multi-millionaire. "You? Why, so it is! You—Bill Bluffem, my school chum, my faithful companion in all schoolboy pranks. Great Scott! And fallen to such depths!"

"Well," exclaimed Burglar Bill, "if it ain't Goldie me old pal! I know all about you. You're president of one of the largest financial kindred in this country, and I ain't nothing but a common, ordinary burglar. No, no! If you let me go this mornin', I promise never to let you catch me again! Will you?"

"Ha ha!" laughed the financier. "Let you go? Well, I should say not. No! Never! For I'm going to make you a partner in the kindred. For years I have been looking for a man with the proper training."

So saying, the two men embraced each other fondly.—Houston Post.

SNAGS IN LIFE'S CURRENT

Are Something That It Is the Part of Wisdom for All of Us to Avoid.

A young woman in a rage with her fiancé for some apparently inexcusable oversight, exclaimed: "I never can forgive him—never!" Her grandmother, sitting near, looked up from her knitting. "I tell you, my dear, you're wrong. I could not forgive what it was I could not forgive, but the emptiness of life that resulted is still in my mind. Don't get hung up on a snag in the stream, my dear. Snags alone are not so dangerous—it's the debris that clings to them that makes the trouble. Pull yourself loose and go on."

In our judgment we must first get rid of the eternal self, we must learn to look at the world wholly in its relation to the person to whom it belongs, not in its relation to ourselves. None of us is created perfect, and few—if any—attain perfection. The most we can attain is a perfect understanding of this fact and a self-control that will enable us to pull loose from the snag and go on with the main stream of the life which in other respects is in harmony with ours; not stay hung up, emphasizing the snag and giving it more weight than the stream itself. To be able to ignore is often the most saving of graces.—Anne Shannon Monroe in Good Housekeeping.

Nation Without Language

One of the strangest things to be found among the nations of the world is the fact that Switzerland has no language of its own. The official languages of Switzerland are French, Italian and German, all three being recognized as the "mother tongue" of the majority of the inhabitants.

A majority of the people speak German, while the others are French and Italian, varying as a rule, according to the proximity of the people to each country whose tongue they speak.

Public documents and notices are printed in both the French and German languages.

In the Swiss national parliament the members make their speeches either in French or German, the members being so familiar with one language as the other.

Statements from the President of Switzerland are furnished to the news papers in both languages.

Panama Springs Geographic Joke

Panama, perpetrator one of the greatest of geographic jokes on those who visit it. It conveniently makes east west. From Panama City the sun rises out of the Pacific, which to most American minds is the proper place only for setting suns. And he who sails through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific travels not from east to west, as he naturally expects to do, but from west to east, or, more accurately, from northwest to southeast. One gets the impression, as one writer has phrased it, that "there is something crooked about this." The crookedness is found to be in the isthmus, which runs predominantly east and west, instead of north and south, and in addition makes a double curve like the letter S, so that at one place the Atlantic waters are actually west of those of the Pacific.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

Liner Aquitania Stayed at Her Dock Until Lost Youngster Had Been Discovered

Her whistle had groaned several warnings and the news call going had been sounded up and down the companionway to drive several hundred persons ashore. The gangplank of the Aquitania was about to be drawn upon the pier as a woman rushed up crying:

"My baby! I've lost my baby!" Pier guards elicited from her that she had gone on board the ship with her child to say good-by to relatives and when she went back on the pier she thought the tot had toddled down the gangplank after her. The child had been swallowed in the excitement on the ship's deck, however.

A search for the missing child was instituted while the liner was held. Mother and volunteer searchers went from deck to deck. Up on the liner's bridge Capt. Sir James Charles paced back and forth impatiently.

Fifteen minutes elapsed. The sob of a small choked voice was heard in a stateroom. There one of the volunteer stewardesses, an English nurse, was endeavoring to comfort a little ship of a girl who was too frightened to speak.

The mother was called and she picked up the child and hurried to the pier. Then the giant liner sailed away.—New York World.

AMERICAN GIRLS NOT SO BAD

Our Flappers May Smoke, but They Did Not Start the "Fad," Is the Defense.

It would be deplorable if all American girls, or the average American girl, or a majority of American girls, or a considerable proportion of American girls, could be described truthfully as an English novelist describes the American girl:

"Unbalanced, cigarette smoking, undisciplined morsels of sex, luring men to find new lips to be kissed."

There are "undisciplined morsels of sex" as there were when Salome danced before Herod and Thais accompanied Alexander the Great upon his Asian marches, comments the Louisville Courier-Journal. One remembers Salome and Thais without having heard of the millions of their contemporaries who knew how to keep their heads and hearts and souls and make swarming choices.

One "undisciplined morsel of sex" gives her sex in foundation, even its standing. By the exception, as often as otherwise, is proved the type that rules.

Temperament sometimes serves the ends of publicity to a certain class of writers. But while denouncing the American girl as a very forward March chick how could any one charge the American girl peculiarly with smoking cigarettes?

White women—smokers had the habit before America was discovered—first smoked tobacco in England and France. When this country was a wilderness, with the white settlers backing with their axes at its edges, London women of fashion were smoking pipes in places of public entertainment.

The modern revival of smoking by women began, American women are assured, in England. Twenty years ago the associated American correspondent noted the news that British debutantes smoked cigarettes "openly" at the Ascot races.

TELLS ALL ABOUT AIRPLANE

Explanations of the Mystery of Flying. Made for the Benefit of the Uninitiated.

The airplane is being used more and more today for travel, so if you want to know about the latest means of transportation, you want to know something about the airplane and why it flies. A writer in the Christian Science Monitor.

Instead of a driver, you call the man who handles the plane a pilot. When the pilot wants to start the engine or motor in the plane, he pulls on the propeller in front just as you would pull to crank an automobile, and when he gets the propeller spinning, then the motor is ready for flight.

The pilot always rises several hundred feet on the ground before he goes up in the air. He always tries to start flying in the face of the wind instead of with it.

Do you know what is meant when a plane "slides" in the air? The pilot has not tipped his airplane enough in making a turn or circle and the plane goes along level instead of following the turn. Slipping is just the opposite of skidding, for then the aviator has tipped his plane too much to one side and it actually slips or falls a distance before he can right it.

A monoplane is an airplane that has one plane or wing. A biplane has two and a triplane has three. Next time you see an airplane notice what kind it is and see what else you can learn about it.

Lacks Architectural Treasure

Tarbes, birthplace of Marshal Foch, lacks the architectural treasures of the towns of northern France. Its ancient cathedral suffers from heaviness and a mixture of style. The only remaining part of the castle of the counts of Rodez is a tower which latterly has been converted into a prison.

Turba, some miles away from the present-day Tarbes, was capital of a Roman state, and the bishopric of Tarbes appears as early as the fifth century. It appears in later history as a sufferer from the religious wars in the sixteenth century, and the scene of a victory by Wellington over the French in 1814.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

One on the Pardon

A southern clergyman tells of an occasion when a friend of his had obtained a job for a colored man who had been for a long time out of work. The clergyman thought that the man must be getting pretty shabby, so he looked up a suit—they were much of a size—and took it around to the man's house.

The man's wife took it, and the clergyman waited in the room, as he says, "ready to be overwhelmed with thanks." But when the woman returned she said:

"My husband thanks you, sah, but he says that he don't hold with parson's clothes, but if you've got anything as would suit a man he'll be glad to have a look at it."

"You-Air"

Prof. Annette B. Hopkins, of the English department at Goucher college, says that the only way to iron out sectional accents and colloquialisms is to get "sen, young and train 'em." If a student is not made aware of her peculiarities of speech before she is seventeen or eighteen, Professor Hopkins finds, it is usually too late for effecting permanent corrections. "To achieve a speaking vocabulary unpolished by localisms," she said recently, "requires more than four years of college." Thus, at Goucher, "you-air" is a firmly established institution.—New York Evening Post.

Too Dangerous

Vicar.—You mustn't neglect their education. Mrs. Craddock. Why, I had to punch severely to send my boys to school.

Mrs. Craddock.—Ah, sir, but Craddock is too feared of the law to do anything like that.—Tit-Bits.

THE WAY I FEEL ABOUT IT

BY WILBUR E. SUTTON
In National Republican

Automobiles have another benefit—they have decreased gossip. It is difficult to talk much and drive a car.

Clothes may not make the man, but sometimes his wife's clothes break him.

The suspicious man is always suspected.

If you haven't learned that a dollar put away today is worth a dollar and six cents a year from today, you are morally certain to end your days in the poor-house or as a penniless dependent upon somebody that doesn't want you around but has to keep you for fear the neighbors will talk.

People can go to the devil lots faster nowadays because they can travel faster in an automobile than in a buggy.

The love of money may be the root of all evil, but money itself is the oil of much joy.

There is a time for all things except hate.

If you can get fun out of life you can prevent life's making fun of you.

Girls more and more are exposing their cars, but there is nothing to indicate that they have missed much by keeping them covered.

A "society leader" is so called because she leads her husband around by the nose.

The one who is fond of repeating that "all fools are not dead yet," knows of one that isn't.

Of course you "can't believe all you hear," but most people do.
