WHERE PROSPERITY STARTS

In the fall of 1920, prices paid to farmers for their products entered a period of drastic decline. From then until a few months ago the industrial depression was due largely to the shrunken purchasing power of the American farmer.

Four months ago the values of crops were calculated by the Department of Agriculture at eight billion dollars less than two years before.

While the farmer's income was shrinking, the prices of the manufactured articles he needed did not drop in proportion. The farmer could not afford to sell eight bushels of grain to pay eight dollars for a pair of shoes. He sold the wheat because he had to. But he found he could get along, somehow, without the new shoes. In fact, he got along for a year or so without buying anything.

Slowly but surely the wide difference between the prices of farm products and of merchandise the farmer buys is being wiped out by the law of supply and demand.

The business situation of the nation is improving. The backbone of our prosperity is found in the fertility of our soil. We are able to produce more than any other nation, a wide variety of the things the world needs. When our farmers are given a fair return on their investment and labor, they insure to the nation as a whole a fair degree of prosperity.

The first and most interesting sign of better business is that prices paid to the farmer are going up.

It is now plain to be seen that these prices fell below levels warranted by actual conditions. Downward prices were assisted by involved conditions in Europe. A nationwide attack on grain exchanges by the farming interests weakened considerably the country's grain market. Then, when farmers expected three dollars a bushel for their wheat, they were urged by their grange organizations and their leaders not to sell.

When prices fell to somewhere near one dollar a bushel, and farmers were obliged to sell, they came to the conclusion that they had been penalized for holding. Reversing their methods, in the fall of 1921 they marketed wheat at a speed never equaled in the history of the country. Speculative markets found themselves unprepared to handle such huge quantities of wheat, and this helped to make the whole situation abnormal.

As crop figures begin to come from the Argentine and Australia and from Canada it becomes clear that in none of those countries will the yield approach earlier estimates.

The result is that, while May wheat options were selling at $1.12 a bushel in the middle of last October, they had gone as high as $1.47 by the first of March.

Confidence in the future has to a considerable extent been restored. While the relative value of the price the farmer receives and the price he pays for things he must buy is still unsettled, much progress is being made in the right direction.

GERMAN VS. AMERICAN PAPER MILLS

German and Scandinavian newsprint is pouring into the American market at $10 to $20 per ton under the domestic price of $70.

These prices are below American production costs, so that relatively small offerings of European paper have sufficed to break the market. Perhaps most profound effect has been exerted upon buyers who have been encouraged to withhold orders.

Foreign competition with American paper-makers commenced around May, 1920, when Norwegian manufacturers began taking steps to rush heavy shipments of newsprint to this country to take advantage of record-high prices around $130 a ton.

This movement did not attain formidable proportions until around the following September. At that time a considerable amount of German newsprint also found its way into our market.

Translated into depreciated European paper currency, however, this "low" price is still highly attractive. Sweden is now the leading newsprint European export shipper to this country. Canada, of course, still holds first place as a source of "outside" supplies.

Paper production costs in Germany are ridiculously low. According to latest available figures, the highest paid labor in German mills receives 11 cents an hour.

The American rate is $3.80 a day. Some authorities expect wages in German mills to be stabilized at $1.75 a week, compared to present American scales yielding $42 to $23 a week for similar labor.

German raw material supplies are also obtained more advantageously than American stocks.

SUGAR, SUGAR, SUGAR

During the European war our country had the cheapest sugar in the world.

It was due to the fact that American beet sugar supplied about two-fifths of our needs.

Beet sugar stabilized the prices and international speculation could not get a grip on Uncle Sam.

Sugar administration by the governments of the world stimulated cane sugar production tremendously.

Cuban and other cane sugars can now be dumped on our county at two cents a pound, fatal to the beet industry.

Present tariffs on cane sugar are $1.60 per 100 pounds and a $2.00 per 100 tariff is asked by beet growers.

American farmers cannot grow beets on a $1.60 tariff and Congress should not scrap the beet sugar industry.

THE WAY I FEEL ABOUT IT (By Wilbur E. Sutton)

A Beautiful Thought
One way to make money on the stock market or in oil stocks is to get a tin can—an old tomato can will do—place your money in it, and bury it in the back garden.

Some say they got along with four hour's sleep, but there are men who would confer a favor on the rest of humanity by sleeping twenty-four.

Every youth thinks he'd like to live in hotels, but you never hear anybody bragging about it who is forced to live in a hotel.

A man may not know what is good for him, but he never wants any woman to tell him what she thinks is good for him.

There are more good people in the world than bad, but they don't attract one-tenth of the attention.

If you please everybody, you can't please yourself.

Few modern saints wear sackcloth, and no devils.

The greatest leaders still follow somebody.

Much that passes for independence is mere impudence.

A small chief delights to give big orders.

A military mind is often found in a big setting.

"Two heads are better than one"—if they're not both bonchheads.

Every modern young man and woman thinks they will be just as free after marriage as before, but did you ever know one that was?

There are few things more impractical than a "practical" joke.

Another of the horrible after-effects of war is having to listen to a lot of health young men tell how it happened that they did not get into the war.

The world ain't owe a living to the man who thinks it does.

BRIEF BAY CITY NEWS OF INTEREST

(From the Examiner)
The boat of the Alley Lumber Co. which has been undergoing extensive repairs in Fishermen's Cove drydock, is about ready for service and will shortly begin towing again.

Sam Webb, who owned what is now the Snook ranch near Bay City, and after selling the place to Mr. Snook, moved his family to Waldport, is transacting business here.

Preparations are being made at Rockaway this year to hold a big Fourth of July celebration.

J. A. Brant of Portland, owner of residence property in the north end of Bay City, is passing several days supervising improvements to the residence house on the place.

Hans Lassard is overhauling his fishing boat preparatory to the forthcoming opening of the commercial salmon fishing season. The boat is moored in Fisherman's Cove, which is the harbor for boats of all local fishermen, being situated near the mill of the Alley Lumber Co.

Mr. Edson, whose home is in the eastern part of Bay City, met with a serious accident last week at Belding, where he has been in the employ of the lumber company at that place, which may cause the loss of an eye. While at work a flying knot that was squeezed loose from a timber struck on squarely in the eye, and it is feared that the injury has impaired the sight to such an extent that blindness in that eye may result.
