practice was reformed. Representative Collier of Klamath Falls has the right idea in his constitutional amendment, now pending before the legislature. It restricts the voting right to registered voters. The citizen who hasn't enough sense of loyalty and enough gumption to register, will find himself (or herself) out in the cold on election day—disfranchised—a slacker without power to cast a ballot. A sound idea.—Oregon Voter.

CARD OF THANKS We wish to thank all for the interest taken in our little daughter and sister during her recent illness; for the kindness shown in our bereavement and for the floral offerings Mr. and Mrs. Knowles Mrs. V. I. Mills, (Sister) Agatha, (Sister) Margaret, (Sister) Earl Knowles, (Brother).

A voter who hasn't enough energy and patriotism to take the trouble to register is not much of a voter. Any real sense of responsibility on the part of a man or woman citizen would force the effort required to register. But on election day there are always a lot of so-called citizens who turn up to vote, and are sworn in by the professional swayers-in who are always handy around some polling place. Gangs of transients who flit thither and thither are thus sworn in in such parts of the state where construction work is temporarily in progress. These transients are voted by politicians pretty much as the gangsters used to vote their gangs in days of old, before election

CAN YOU BEAT IT? Can you beat this? The average bill for electric lights and appliance operation is $25 a year in the American home, while the household spends $95 a year on tobacco, $68 a year on gasoline, $50 a year on ice cream and $48 on candy, says the Oregon Public Utility Information Bureau. People cheerfully pay good money for luxuries and a whole lot more of it, too, than they pay for lighting their homes every night, not to mention little services like running electric fans, toasters, etc., and yet they sometimes howl over the cost of the juice. Service for service and value for value electricity is by far the cheapest commodity on sale.
