When we think of cream it may be condensed or it may be ice cream or even cream of wheat, or the nice rich old fashioned cream that we get from the proverbial

Jersey. But when we think of Shaving Cream, men who have tried it can only think of Colonial Club. In their opinion it is the ONLY Shaving Cream. It lathers instantly, dries slowly and does not smart, or burn the face. In Vernonia, it's sold at

RUSSIAN STUDENTS SUFFERS HARDSHIPS

University of Oregon, Eugene, Oct. 3,—(Special.)—Four thousand miles, all the way across Siberia, a Russian lad of 18 was carried on horseback out of the reach of hostile bolsheviks, which made possible an escape to the United States. That was seven years ago. Today that young Russian, George Berezovsky is a student in the University of Oregon, majoring in business administration.

His story is in many ways similar to many others told by Russian refugees who came to the United States during the recent revolution in their country.

Berezovsky was born in Moscow, twenty-five years ago. His father was for twenty-four years a professor of surgery in the university of Moscow. He had received his degree from, and had taught four years in a university in Berne, Switzerland, before accepting the professorship in Moscow. The mother was the owner of two large factories, and when the revolution broke out most of the machinery was taken away piece by piece, until finally the authorities seized both plants. Both parents died about eight years ago.

"I rode four thousand miles on horseback. I would have traveled on the railroad, but it was in the hands of the bolsheviks. The journey took about two months of hard riding, but we had to stop in many cities along the way, so it was nearly a year from the time we started until we reached Harbin in China.

"Sometimes when I was riding in winter, though I wore heavy clothes, it would get so cold that I would have to keep my eyes open all the time to keep the eye-lashes from freezing together. I had a companion who rode one horse seven thousand miles."

"From the bolsheviks I learned that everything that belongs to me belongs to you, and everything that belongs to you belongs to me," but in particular application it was "Everything that belongs to you belongs to me, and everything that belongs to me belongs also to me."

"At the time the Bolshevicks took command of Russia all business was small and privately owned. It should have passed through the corporation stage, then government ownership, and finally socialism. But they changed too quick. If they had made this growth gradual they might have been successful. By government ownership they eliminated competition, the main factor of successful industrial development which was still needed."

"After a short while they understood that they were acting too rapidly, and that the quick change in social and economic conditions was wrong. It was too early to abolish private ownership. The capitalistic stage is a pre-requisite of socialism and the Bolshevicks, by applying Lenin's theory of "New Economic Policy," made an attempt to substitute government ownership for private control of business. But as we see now, they failed, and it will be a long time before Russia is prosperous again."

Buy across the Counter

WHEN you buy across the counter in the stores of this town, you are using good business judgment. Why? There are many reasons, but one of the most important is this:

You can buy what you want at the price you wish to pay! You are not obliged to accept "something just as good," because you are in a position to compare values and make your own selections.

When you trade at home you are helping your friends to help you! And there is no finer thing in life than neighborly co-operation. It always pays—in happiness and satisfaction as well as dollars and cents.
