Sleeve and Vestee Sets Give Smart Touch to Any Frock

Want to make your last season's sleeveless black satin frock take on airs of the "very latest"? A detachable sleeve and vestee set as pictured will do the trick. The modish long and full sleeves which fashion declares we must wear give individuality to the most ordinary dress.

If you are fortunate enough to have your attention called to "travelers' samples," ignore not the opportunity. Buy up a half dozen or more of the perfectly gorgeous lengths of gold and silver lace or marvelous embroidered bands which one "gets for a song." Then to home and a quiet nook in the sewing room, where with your treasures spread before you let genius inspire deft fingers for the victorious achievement of a handsome detachable sleeve and collar set warranted to transform the simplest frock into a costume smart enough for bridge party, afternoon tea or select club meeting.

The sleeves in this picture are made of rose-beige georgette with gold lace gathered in to the wristband.

"FIFTY-FIFTY FELLOWS"

(In our mail box)

Just say you were a merchant,
And your bills amounting high;
Would you be so absent minded
As to let your temper fly.

Would you waste your time a griev-
ing;
Because some man didn't pay his bill
Or the first thing you could think of
To climb the O. A. hill.

Would it do you any good to climb
Up that steep old muddy hill,
And garnishee some poor devil,
Who's toiling at the mill?

He surely had good intentions,
Or he'd up and left you flat,
Just wait a little longer friends,
You'll see where you are at.

Just take a tip from me friends,
Did you ever stop and think,
That there are also others
Who are very near the brink.

Thank God there is one man,
That thought of others too,
He's going to get his pay boys,

Altho' my dollars are few.

He lives here in Vernonia
And he's lived here many a day,
Believe me boys, that man,
Is going to get his pay.

Now folks don't take advantage,
Of a man because he owns a store
Or think for once he has no bills,
That come knocking at his door.

For he, boys, like yourselves,
Has bills that he must meet,
So if you play fifty-fifty,
Your friendship can't be beat.

Money, Brains or Love?

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

MARY CURTIS was acknowledged to be the prettiest girl in town, when I was a boy. I did not myself enjoy the privilege of urban life, living instead on a farm some distance out, and so viewing the town maiden with some degree of awe and admiration.

Mary was the popular citizen from the moment she entered high school. Her father was by no means affluent. He did, in fact, operate the village hardware store, but Mary was his only child and upon her he lavished the results of his limited gains from disposing of base burners and shingle nails, and garden tools. Mary had the clothes, and the curly locks, and the pleasant smile, and an eye out for the main chance. All the fellows were crazy about her.

She got through high school without any permanent emotional entanglements, and she was well on in college before she actually had to say yes or no to any matrimonial proposal. Whenever she had seen an offer of marriage coming her way she had always been able to duck or to sidestep the encounter. When she was a senior she had a dozen admirers at least, but there were three with whom she ultimately realized she would have to settle. They meant to have a decision.

Clayton was the brainiest man in college. If keenness of mind and an ability to solve a difficult problem when it presents itself count for anything, then Clayton would be heard from some day. But he was cold, he was self-centered, he was personally ambitious, and he had little more than future prospects. He was not an interesting lover.

Jordan loved her to distraction and unwisely let her know it. He was the most unselfish, the most popular, and the most likable man in college, but he was poor, desperately poor. Whoever married him would have to start humbly and be satisfied, at first at least, with hard work and love.

Martin was more or less of a non-entity, but he had money. He was uninteresting and stupid, but he dressed well, he sent her flowers and took her riding and she knew he could give her a beautiful home, good clothes, motor cars, and an easy, comfortable life.

Brains, money, love—which should she choose? She didn't hesitate long. Shortly after she got out of college she married Martin and he took her to the big ugly house which he had built for her.

I see her often, and I wonder sometimes if she ever regretted the choice she made. She has grown rather stout; the corners of her mouth droop; her face shows a rather dissatisfied, discontented mind. She's hard to get on with, the neighbors say. She has found Martin stupid, and she's discovered that money, after all, isn't everything. I wonder if she doesn't sometimes think regretfully of the day when Jordan told her that he loved her and when she refused him, for Jordan got on very well and he is said to have the happiest home in town.

CONSIDER THE HEN.

Hard Times means nothing to a hen. She just keeps on digging worms and laying eggs, regardless of what the newspapers say about conditions.

If the ground is hard, she scratches harder.

If it's dry, she digs deeper.

If she strikes a rock, she works around it.

But always she digs up worms and turns them into hard shelled profits as well as tender broilers.

Did you ever see a pessimistic hen? Did you ever know of one starving to death waiting for worms to dig themselves to the surface?

Did you ever hear one cackle because times were hard?

Not on your life. She saves her breath for digging and her cackles for eggs.

We are digging—so are you.—Selected, Rotary Reminder.

HAZARDS OF THE ROAD.

In his address before the Minnesota State Bar association, Hon. J. Adam Bede said: "They tell a story of an Oklahoma Indian who made a fortune in oil last summer, which illustrates the condition of our country. Having made his fortune, he thought he would see America first. So he bought himself a car, and drove away. Next day he returned to the salesman, all banged up. 'What's the matter?' The Indian said 'I drive out big car; buy gallon moonshine; step on gas. See fence; he hop fence; pretty soon see bridge coming down road. He turn out to let bridge go by. Bang! Car gone. Gimme 'nother.'"

Mr. Bing—"What's the difficulty, my dear?"

Mr. Bing—"This one tells how to use up old potatoes, but it does not say how old the potatoes must be."

You ate 107 1/2 pounds of sugar during 1925. Did you know it? Maybe you didn't realize it, but it's a fact, nevertheless.

The official figures for the United States, which were received yesterday by the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining corporation, show that the consumption of sugar in this country last year increased 13 percent over 1924.

The exact figures for the year were 6,510,000 tons; while in 1924 a total of only 4,854,000 tons were required to satisfy America's sweet tooth.

Officials of the C and H company explain the increase as having been due to the low price of sugar, combined with the fact that the American public is commencing to realize that sugar ranks high among foods, not only for its food value but also because of its energy and health-building qualities.
