Tells About Alaska

Dr. C. J. Wight visited the high school recently and gave an educational and entertaining talk on Alaska. He gave much information on the flora and fauna there and also on the general geography and genealogy of that country.

Dr. Wight said there is a great future for anyone who went there. He said in 20 years that will be a very valuable and productive country and that our children would surely benefit by what we did. He told about the industries, salmon, fur and mining. How the dogs, or huskies as they are called, are the mainstay of the country. The country is not suited for road or railroads and the only means of transportation is by dog team, although every town has many automobiles.

The natives on the Pacific coast of Alaska are not Eskimos, but Indians and they are as well educated as the average white man. They are of small stature. The natives on the Bering sea and Arctic ocean are Eskimos, very large men. It is commonly believed that the Eskimos live in ice huts. This is not so, according to Dr. Wight. Some live in wood frame houses erected by themselves, while others live in skin houses. The people do not mine gold like they used to, as it is still there, because of the high price of grubstake. They are now turning to agriculture.

The seniors have finished "Henry Esmond" and are now doing the exercises in Sharps English exercises.

The seniors are very interested in chemistry, although one of the members of the class had a serious explosion while performing an experiment and was forced to wash his face with ammonia.
