

"RED" GRANGE

(Heien C. H. Estelle) Harold "Red" Grange, the football idol, speaking over the radio, on Golden Rule Sunday, emphasized the fact that fair play and clean living are essential to success in all lines of endeavor.

"Football is like life," said he. "One fellow carries the ball and gets most of the credit. Yet ten men have helped him to push through and without them he would not have gained an inch."

"There is only one way I know of to become an athlete: Get lots of sleep and live a normal, regular, healthy life. Don't smoke. Don't drink liquor. Don't be a loafer on the street. Think, dream, and believe that you will come to the top and you'll get there."

"Several things helped me in football. I have never smoked in my life. My father saw to it that I kept good hours until I got my growth."

Football is one of the best games ever played. It demands more from the player than any other game. Its rewards are spiritual rather than material, but they are certain.

"Red" Grange said that the big thing which he had won from football was not the present monetary reward but, rather, the more permanent matter of a training in courage, stamina and ability to use mind and muscles more effectively.

"Red" Grange laid the foundation for success in early life. His advice to other aspiring athletes is timely. Many agencies are contributing to athletic success for our teachers in the public schools are showing boys and girls why alcohol and tobacco are useless. States have passed laws prohibiting the sale of tobacco products to those who have not reached years of discretion.

"Red" Grange proved his belief in the Golden Rule when a cigarette firm offered him $10,000,000 for the privilege of using his name with the insinuation that the monetary reward of football was secondary. He proved it by the above incident. "The benefits are in character building."

The Majestic

Being buried beneath a pile of sand, gravel and clay for six long hours was one of the unpleasant experiences of Leon Errol during the filming of exterior scenes in First National's latest comedy, "The Lunatic at Large," showing at the Majestic theatre, Saturday night and Sunday matinee.

Winsome Lois Moran has the featured role that of the daughter, in Fox Films version of "The Music Master," showing at the Majestic theatre Sunday only. This dainty little actress, who is only seventeen, again scores a triumph in this screen version of the great Warfield-Belasco success. Alec B. Francis is cast as the lovable Music Master and Neil Hamilton the lover.

Keeping his audiences always on its toes, Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s Western star has sprung a smashing surprise on his fans in his newest picture, "The Cowboy Cop," which is showing at the Majestic theatre Monday. The picture opens in the usual breezy manner of the Typical Tyler Treats, but after one brief glimpse of Tom in his cowboy outfit, the audience is whisked into the intrigue of the "Big Town's" underworld, where Tom as a mounted cop, puts his knowledge of guns and horses to some very thrilling tests.

In "Wolf's Clothing," the Warner Bros. picture starring Monte Blue, the Majestic theatre has one of the most diverting pictures of the season. Founded upon Arthur Somers Roche's story, it tells a tale that recalls the spirit of O. Henry. For here New York is once more transformed into Bagdad-on-the-Subway, and once more adventure comes to commonplace people and turns them into types of true romance.

"The Third Degree," the Warner Bros. production next Thursday and Friday at the Majestic theatre, is the film of version of the noted stage success by Charles Klein. Dolores Costello is starred in this gripping police melodrama, directed by Michael.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The Christian church is planning for some good work in the near future and the children of the Bible school are looking forward to better class rooms and will take more pride in their rooms to have a part in finishing it to suit their own taste.

We are well pleased to note the public feeling and interest manifested in helping us to realize this new Church home.

The pastor will preach as usual next Sunday and his sermon will be governed by the developments of plans for being in the new Church home.

Public is cordially invited to all services. We have set the day to move into the new church for March 13.

Christian endeavor at 6:30.

"OLD HEZ" COAXES FISH WITH VERSE

Beguiles Finny Tribe With Talk and Rhyme.

Arkansas City, Ark.—Old Hez says he has never pulled a bass from a stream with half the thrill he has when he trails dink spalls along the ground to the remains of an old Indian camp and there digs up arrowheads, axes, spearheads and mauls used by America's early settlers.

Who is Old Hez? He's an authority on both bass and Indian relics—B. F. Lloyd of Arkansas City, Kans., former newspaper man, printer and painter by trade, fly fisherman by profession, with an insatiable hobby for collecting Indian relics.

Among fly fishermen Mr. Lloyd is known as Old Hez, a dean of bass fishermen in this part of the country. Up and down the streams of Kansas, Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Illinois and Indiana Old Hez with his fishing equipment is a familiar figure. He has taught scores of young men how to trick wary bass from their lairs; he has caught fish both big and small in winter and summer.

Beguiles Them With Verse.

"Talk to 'em, Coax 'em along a little," is the advice of Old Hez on catching fish. "I know their language, and when I step into the stream I begin talking to my fish. All the while I'm pulling him in I'm talking to him, sometimes even in rhyme."

Here's the conversational part of Mr. Lloyd's well known bass poem, "Song of the Wild," with which he beguiles his fish, with a "Come on, grandpa, come on, and quit your fooling," thrown in for a refrain: Good morning, grandpa, good morning—

Hey? Huh? Not so well, did you say? Well, certainly, if your stomach's a-gnawing, Take a cathartic. I assure, 't will stay.

Come out from the brush where the spalling is fair, Get in the open, away from your lair, And increase your size with me, I dare, For this is Old Hez, Old Hez of Ark.

Now he turns from the old log den, As he lingers for friends on his way, Down he goes and makes for the river ledge, then is stopped by the twick of an eye.

When the bass is finally satisfied, "Old Hez" always says: "I should jove."

Mr. Lloyd has been fishing since he was a youngster and he's sixty-two years old now. In his words he has "youngish old men that ever followed a stream." He names by his fishing reel naturally, for he is the son of a well known fly fisherman, the late Capt. R. W. Lloyd, of the Eighty-third Indiana Infantry, in the Civil war.

Must so he loves fishing, however, it's not of his angling exploits that "Old Hez" talks of by the hour now, but of fish and rocks, Indian arrowheads and tomahawks. It's not his fishing reel that he carries out on most of his trips to the river now but a pointed cane with which to brush leaves aside and dig into the earth.

Keen on Indian Relics.

Down by the river he goes—the Walnut river, that flows through the state hills of Kansas—but not to cast back to hungry fish. Sometimes he walks alone, sometimes he sits by the bank staring at the ground in all directions or digs his way into an old cave in the rocks. When he returns, it is not with the usual string of fish, but with a handful of flint or sandstone or agate made by Indians before the white man came.

For "Old Hez" has developed a passion for collecting Indian relics and he boasts that his collection of 1,300 pieces is one of the finest in this part of the country and that he has found some of the rarest specimens of Indian implements in existence.

Almost two sides of his bedroom are hung with cardboard plaques on which arrowheads, spearheads, tomahawks, axes and other things are strung with copper wire. On the floor are piled heavier pieces, such as mauls, cora hawks, tomars and pickles.

The price of all his possessions is a $10,000 fee now, the like of which Mr. Lloyd says he has not found in any Indian collection outside his own.

LOST FORTUNES LYING IN BANKS

Owners and Heirs Are Difficult to Find.

New York.—A neat fortune in unclaimed savings lies in the vaults of New York banks awaiting trace of depositors.

The pennies of "floaters" the world over, from diverging sources and in varying amounts, add to the total which, in one bank alone, has climbed to six figures. Hundreds of depositors have visited banks never to return. They have left their savings and gone, possibly to death, without leaving record of their moves.

Owners and heirs to this fortune are hard to find, says Herbert K. Twitchell, president of the Seaman's Bank for Savings, which, in 100 years of business, has 2,536 dormant accounts totaling $296,938.87. The task, however, is a never-ending one and through a department, instituted for the purpose, constant search is made and every possibility of a claimant exhausted.

The Seaman's bank is one of many which have similar accounts whose depositors have not been heard of in 20 years or more. After this lapse the accounts become "legally dormant." Interest no longer is paid and the banks have use of the money, but not for individual gain.

Up the winding Bowery, in the twilight of the elevated, wander aimless Chinese, men of bearded styles, hatless foreign women, pale, old-faced children. Such is the clientele of the Bowery Savings bank where the dormant accounts total $100,000.

Once in this parade, said a bank official, was Mary Ellen, a quaint old character, seventy years old. She had forgotten some of her accounts and was found to have $12,000 deposited with the bank under four different names.

Interesting to Note Origin of Surnames

It was not until after the Norman conquest that surnames were adopted. They were first given to sick men and to particular individuals. Today we rarely find any appropriate ones in the names we bear. The greatest name of the day may easily carry the name of Coward, while Mr. Fox may be anything but sly. Yet it is probable that the first man to bear the name of Fox was pronounced by a snawling, just as the first Barrett, or Parrott, was most likely a great talker.

Many people were named by reason of their possession of some quality which was associated with a particular animal. Hart, for instance, was no doubt a great runner, and Nightingale could sing. As for the Hud, ducks (pale red breast) and Woodpeckers (woodpecker), they probably received their names from the signs they favored outside their doors.

The most interesting names are those which plainly originated through the occupation of those who held them. There is no doubt about Shepherd, Hedger, Herd, or Board. Ackerman was the man who drove the plow over the acres; Swinart tended swine; and Culvert looked after the culverts; while Wethered was a wether-herd, and Goddard a goat-herd.—London Answers.

Bizet Died a "Failure"

Bizet, the composer of "Carmen," probably the most successful of all classic operas so far as the scope of its popularity is concerned, died at thirty-seven, and it is said he was broken-hearted over the apparent failure of the opera on its first presentation.—Washington Star.

Catbird's Many Moods Puzzle to Bird Lover

Ever since I can remember, catbirds have haunted our garden. I have observed their coming in the spring, their courting time and their nesting time. In the autumn they come by the dozens to feed upon our grapes. Yet the more I observe the catbird, the more he mystifies and interests me.

His aspect is ever changing, one moment a clown, the next a snook, then a trim aristocrat, a dainty nymph, a prankish school boy, an elusive shadow, now here, now there.

His changeableness is confounding and in marked contrast to the robin, a common, unpretentious fellow who never thinks of harassing the bird student by suddenly appearing some thing else every few minutes.

The catbird seems to be an actor who plays an unlimited number of roles in such a convincing way that one can never decide just what he is being. He is—Lorraine Spiller, in the Daily Globe.

Don't Miss the Pattern

Every week a new pattern in the new picture comes at the office, Englewood. He enters at his door until admitted to his office, the first vacant seat, and seldom takes his eyes off the screen while the picture is on. If his view is obstructed he stands with his back to the seat in front, but never leaves.
