Natal School News.

We are working on a health booklet in the sixth grade. Our work is to be sent as an exhibit to the county fair. We feel it will be a success since everyone is taking such interest in it.

The upper grades have been engaging in a series of debates which are proving to be very educative since they enable the pupils to bring forth their powers of expression.

An accident occurred at our school last Tuesday morning when Lester Mowe, a first grade boy, was struck by the swing board. An ugly gash was made just above his eye. He was taken to his home where he received medical attention. He is expected to be in school again Monday.

Fire Protection Needed.

To the Citizens of Vernonia—Your grade school (Lincoln) lately built on Vernonia heights, is somewhat isolated from fire protection, which is two blocks away from the nearest fire hydrant at Second avenue. Your children and investment need better protection.

Dr. C. J. Wight.

"Forest Worker" Magazine Now Ready

The Forest Worker, the bi-monthly magazine issued by the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and heretofore distributed to a limited number of readers, is now available to the public at 25 cents a year or 5 cents a copy, payable to the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., according to the district forester's office at Portland, Oregon.

The Forest Worker is a forestry news magazine carrying brief, non-technical articles, generally of a severely practical character, on growing, cutting, and utilizing timber, and on forest fire prevention and suppression, forestry legislation, and forestry extension and education. The magazine was started originally to keep state and federal foresters, forest schools, forestry associations, and foresters engaged in private practice in touch with each other's work and with the development in forestry throughout this country as well as to some extent with what is being done abroad. It has, however, proved itself resting to lumber companies and other timberland owners, banks, railroads, and other organizations and individuals concerned with the economic aspects of forestry. For example, it is helpful to timberland owners who are considering the adoption of forest management or better fire protection plans for their holdings.

It may prove of special interest in Oregon and Washington right now to chambers of commerce which are starting the organization of forestry committees, as well as to school principals, Camp Fire guards and Boy Scout executives on account of their annual observance of American Forest Week, forest officers state. For the individual or the organization interested in the forest for its own sake and in what is being done both nationally and in the different states to preserve our dwindling woodlands, the Forest Worker provides every two months a fairly complete picture of current progress in this effect.

1926 lumber cut of Oregon and Washington shows increase of about nine per cent over 1925

Ground Squirrels

Should Be Poisoned

The ground squirrels should be poisoned at this time, states County Agent Nelson, as they have recently come out, and as there is a shortage of feed, they take poison readily. By poisoning the squirrels at this time, not only are the old squirrels being destroyed, but also the young ones.

Squirrel poison, a supply of which was prepared recently by Ira N. Gabrielson, of the office of biological survey, is available in the Nehalem valley, at the Vernonia Trading Company, Jim Hill, at Mist, and J. O. Libel, at Birkenfeld.
