About 3 days before farrowing the sow should be confined to the pen or house she will occupy during the farrowing period.

Thoroughly clean the pen, which should be about 7 by 7 feet in size, and see that it is dry, well ventilated, and provided with a guard rail made by placing 2-by-1 inch pieces around the inside of the pen about 10 inches from the floor and from 4 to 6 inches from the sides. This will often prevent the sow from crushing a pig when she lies down. Remove all bedding sweep the floor and sides, and wash with scalding water and lye. When dry, bed the pen with good, clean, dry bedding, such as wheat or rye straw, short or chopped hay, and shredded corn fodder. Do not use oat straw, as it retains moisture and becomes foul too easily.
