VOLUME 1

LAURENCE LOCKNEY, Editor

NUMBER 24.

HONORABLE WILLIAM HOOTS ENDORSES CHICAGO MAYOR

The Honorable William Hoots, candidate for president, came out in a strong and flatfooted statement this week, in which he gives his unqualified endorsement to Mayor Thompson of Chicago, who has entered into a heated campaign to purge the citizenship of America from all British taint. Mr. Hoots praised Mayor Thompson's action in having a pair of bronze British lions removed from the steps of the Chicago public library, and recommends that a pair of lone American eagles be placed in their stead, to encourage the youth of the land to uphold all parts of the constitution except the eighteenth amendment which is not much in favor with Mayor Thompson. Mr. Hoots said: "Were it not for such gallant leaders as Mayor Thompson, Chicago would not be a safe place in which to live. I endorse his action in riding the library of books that do not meet with his approval. I endorse his threat to burn them in a pyre that will smell to high heaven. The bulldog tenacity of that upright and honorable guardian of the alw gibes him that indomitable courage to horn in where a cautious angel would pause to reconnoitre. Let us hope that the ridicule piled upon him by the newspapers of the land will find his massive head as impregnable as a stone wall. It is time to get back to the principals of our fathers, who burned up everything and everybody they didn't believe in, and it is such leaders as Mayor Thompson who are peculiarly fitted to guide the destinies of the nation in such an undertaking."

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE FROM COYOTE GULCH

Bassmouth Baker of Bullfrog Buttes was in the Gulch this week for the purpose of laying in a new supply of chewing tobacco, the recent shower of rain having seeped through the cracks of the palatial shack on his mining claim and soaked his tobacco up so that it is all soggy and unfit for mastication.

Hermides Houghton is contemplating putting up a stove in his house before the icy blasts of winter strike their cruel fangs into this section. Hermides has been cooking out in the yard all summer, being one of these back to nature persons and not possessing a stove anyhow, but when the howler the other day put out his fire right in the middle of a meal he started to looking around for a second hand stove.

CHILD PSYCHOLOGY

It is with great and absorbing interest and eclay that ye editor reports he receipt of Millinger Moncrief's new book on Child Psychology, published by Dumb and Bell, Boston, at two dollars a shot. The book is so much different from the manner in which we were brought up that we got many a good laugh while perusing its pungent pages. Not many of the citizens and residents of Cactus Flat and its environs and other outlying districts know anything about psychology in bringing up their several offsprings. They still resort to the elm club, as did their fathers before them and their fathers before that. The readers of The Catamount have never learned that when you want to get a boy to bring in a load of wood that you simply tell him you want him to go fishing, so that his spirit rebels and he immediately goes out and brings in a big armfull of wood without any back talk. It is a good book and ye editor heartily agrees with every word in it, although about two-thirds of the book didn't mean any more to our understanding than eeney-meeneey-miney-mo. If the book does get a wide circulation, however, we would suggest that a book also be written for the child, telling the child how to conduct himself while the intelligent parent is learning to apply the new-found wisdom of psychology.

ANOTHER LIE NAILED

"I understand you barely escaped when your house burned down," said Old Quib Skills to Miss Eugenia Lammemoor, today.

"That is quite untrue," retorted Miss Lammemoor. "I had my night clothes on."

In making gingerbread the dough mixture is best when not too thin. When the cake is taken from the oven, let it stand for 15 to 30 minutes before taking from the pan. This will give a better texture and prevent it from falling.

If enough meat for two days is bought, the leftovers may be used the next day in croquettes, stuffed peppers, stew, or served sliced cold.

The very rapid progress of our markets is really their best recommendation. Nothing we can say will be half as important as the widespread public endorsement they are now getting. Portland folks know good meats and good service and they evidently appreciate these things when combined with unequalled savings. If you haven't started depending on our markets for your meats let us urge you to try them.
