Salads are an easy means of getting some of the raw foods in the diet.

To keep the juice from running out of apple pies, wet the undercrust and fold the upper crust over it, pressing the two together with a fork. Slits in the top crust to allow the steam to escape are also essential.

While a little cocoa occasionally adds variety to the child's breakfast, it is best to use only enough cocoa for flavor and to have the beverage only slightly sweetened.

If the menu for the day has been lacking in vegetables or fruit, a choice of fruit as dessert for the evening meal will help make up the deficiency. The wise housewife will not have all the expensive foods in one day and then have a conscience about the grocery bill and have all the less expensive ones for a while.

Many stock raisers think of range improvement in terms of artificial reseeded, but investigations on typical range areas of the west have shown that natural revegetation is far more practicable than artificial reseeded. The first essential of range improvement is to limit the number of stock to fit the carrying capacity of the range, and the second is to limit the grazing so that a large percentage of the palatable vegetation catches maturity.

One cow producing 500 pounds of butter fat a year is just as profitable as 14 cows each producing 100 pounds a year—and one cow means considerably less work. A study of the records of 152,000 cows on test in 1928 in dairy herd improvement associations showed a rapid gain in income over cost of feed as butterfat production of 100 to 500 pounds a year. The cows in the groups having an average average butter fat production of 100 pounds a year returned an average income over cost of feed of $15. At 200 pounds the income above feed cost was $64; at $300, $113; at 400 pounds, $165 and at 500 pounds $215.

"Country" hides sell for less than "packer" hides, partly because of careless methods of salting and curing country hides. After removing the hide from the animal, says the U. S. department of agriculture, leave it in a cool, dry dark place with the flesh side up until the animal heat has escaped. Then salt it promptly and thoroughly. Keep it clean and away from water. Do not let the hide dry out either before or after salting and do not allow it to freeze. Spread out the hide smoothly, being sure to open up any folds. Use plenty of fresh, clean salt—about 1 pound to each pound of hide. Too much salt will do no harm; too little will. Salt more heavily the thicker parts, such as the head and neck.

Buy sheets 24 to 36 inches wider and longer than usually seen so that the ends and sides can be well tucked in. This length also allows for a generous turnover on the top sheet to protect the blankets and comfortable.

Tex Rankin, Famous Flier, Establishes New Loop Record

Portland, January 18—Tex Rankin, internationally famous distance and stunt flyer, has been the recipient of congratulations from all parts of the American continent for his new world's record for outside loops made here last week. In a statement just made, Rankin ascribes much of his success in the record-smashing "loop carnival" to the motor oil which lubricated his plans.

"The engine speed was 2800 R.P.M. at the bottom of the dives," said Rankin, "but due to the perfect lubrication the engine suffered no ill effects under the severe strain.

California Has Rain, Frost, Snow

(By A. D. Moe of Hood River father of the publisher of the Eagle. Mr. and Mrs. Moe recently left by car for a trip to southern California.)

The snow storm held us up at Medford. It had started in the mountains the day we left Salem but had not yet remained on the road, yet on the summit of three mountains it plastered the windshield of the car. We beat the storm to Medford, yet it came there in the evening and lasted two days and nights, partly rain and snow. Tuesday morning it was bright and clear, with the roads cleared up over the mountains, so we left for the south. The road was covered with snow but it had been scraped out, so was good with chains, yet there were more cars going with smooth tires than with protection. Just as we reached the California border a car without chains was coming up in the middle of the road and as it turned to the right to let us by, the car swerved and we narrowly missed a crash.

The snow did not look to be much over a foot deep off the road at the summit of the Siskiyou, while it grew less as we dropped down to Yreka, with the road bare most of the way until the mountain again was reached near Weed.

The bright sun and clear sky made a good view of Mount Shasta, which was better covered with snow than usually seen as we pass this road in winter. The snow was about as deep at Dunsuir as on the summit of the Siskiyou. While the highway was well scraped, the city had done very little clearing, so we had to plow through snow until we got out of town.

Snow was on and off the road until we reached the pavement 15 miles north of Redding, when the chains were removed with safety, and we had a dry road all the way to Oakland.

Waiting at Medford until the storm was over and the roads cleared made the most pleasant trip. Besides, had we kept going when the storm caught us in Oregon, we would have followed it all the way to Oakland, with either snow or rain all the way. The weather has been disagreeably cold since we are here, with some rain at night, while today there is a heavy frost.

This snow and rain, however is a great benefit to this country, even Medford was happy with the snowstorm, as it would all melt into the ground. In northern California, where we have passed through so far, wheat fields and pasture lands are looking nice and green, and even most of the low hills have brightened up with grass coming to life.

After crossing the border all cars coming into California are examined for fruit and vegetables and very few are allowed to remain in the car. Everything is looked over grips opened and everything searched in the car. Oregon apples are about the only fruit allowed to be taken to California. Even California citrus fruit, bought in Oregon is not allowed to be taken back.

If you are one of the mothers who have difficulty keeping the youngest children quiet at the table until everyone has finished, especially if the neighbor children are in the habit of coming to the door shouting through the door to persuade your child to hurry, you may find it expedient to give youngest ones their food earlier than the family meal at a separate little table. There is less distraction, you can give your full attention to their table habits and they are spared the tiresome wait between courses which is necessary at a large family meal. Some of the foods you expect to serve at your own dinner can also be given the children, but those which would not be desirable for them can be withheld and questions avoided. A little planning will soon make it possible to fit these two meals and their preparation easily into the day's routine.

Butter Substitutes Lowering Prices

With butter prices at the lowest point in a decade in the face of mounting consumption of butter substitutes, the immediate outlook for dairying is anything but promising, according to the current market situation report issued by the extension service at Oregon State college. The present situation of burdensome storage holdings of butter followed an increase of 1.76 per cent in butter production during 1929 accompanied by a falling off of consumption totalling 29 million pounds—all while butter substitutes were gaining a comparable amount, the report shows.

"This is a place where the housewife can help the family and the Oregon dairy industry at the same time by taking advantage of the extremely low prices to increase the use of the high grade dairy products," says P. M. Brandt, chief in dairying, best butter can now be bought at a price which is far below the price of poor stuff a year ago."

Most bacteria in milk comes from dirty cows and dirty utensils, but dirty stables, bad air and dirty surroundings all add their share. Experience and investigation indicate that inbreeding of hogs

The 1930 Agricultural Outlook for Oregon will be ready for distribution by mail, radio broadcasting, through the press and otherwise, early in February, according to an announcement just released by Oregon State college extension service. Out of 9,662 cows, in Oregon cow testing associations during November, 753 averaged more than 40 pounds of butterfat, while the average for the whole number was 21.52 pounds, according to an official record just released by N. C. Jamison, extension dairyman of Oregon State college. Of the 490 herds on test, the one owned by Joe Dyer of the Umatilla association placed first, averaging 836 pounds of milk and 45.1 pounds of butter fat. High producing cow was owned by J. K. Kraus of the Yamhill association. Her record was 1212 pounds milk, containing 116.4 pounds of butterfat. Eleven associations reported testing records. These were Melowest No. 1, Pine-Eagle, Wallawa, Tillamook, Baker, Coppeh Valley, Yamhill, Umatilla Union, Central Oregon and Melowest No. 2.

Thirty-three carloads of eggs were shipped from Oregon during November. Nitrogen is the element of fertility most lacking in Oregon soils for production of horticultural crops, says the experiment station.
