McCormick-Deering TRACTORS

VERNONIA TRADING COMPANY
Agents For Nehalem Valley

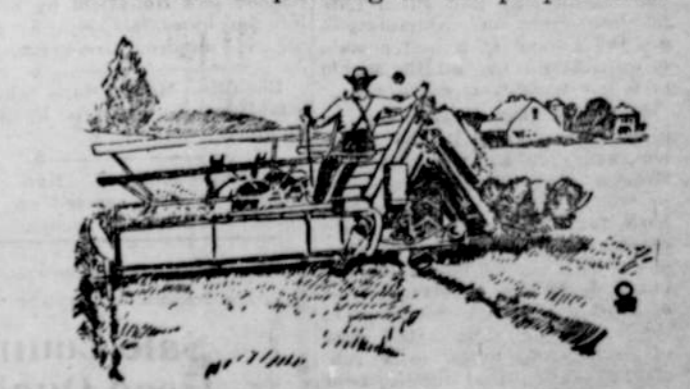

The success of the American farmer tomorrow depends to a large extent upon his ability to produce crops in competition with low-priced foreign labor. This means that it is becoming increasingly necessary to make more efficient use of the time and labor of the men engaged in agricultural production.

The McCormick-Deering line of tillage tools cover every tillage requirement from the smallest to the largest farm. There are tractor disk harrows, spring-tooth and peg-tooth harrows which can be supplied in multiple-section sizes, soil pulverizers, field cultivators, rod weeder, etc.

One of the finest combinations for fast and efficient work on the seed bed is a McCormick-Deering tractor pulling a tractor disk harrow and double-gang pulverizer. In many instances this will put an ideal finish on a seed bed in one operation.

The farm today is considered a factory. Farm profits as well as manufacturer-ing profits depend on low cost of production and increased volume. Farm operations, however, cannot be housed in buildings the same as manufacturing operations and the farmer therefore has to contend with uncertain weather conditions. Farming operations should be done in season. If unfavorable weather causes delay the lost time may be made up and the crop planted in season if adequate power is available. Seasonable planting has a strong influence on yields. Records show that 25 per cent or more increase in crop yields is the result of planting at the proper time.

Successful farmers appreciate the fact that time is the essence of good farming. Experience has demonstrated that there is a time when each farm operation should be done. This period is limited, whether it is seedbed preparation, care of the crops' harvesting, or belt work.
