COUNT VON LUCKNER

The plan seemed an excellent one.

We gathered more weapons, while Doctor Schultz-Eward and his man, on their long rambles, began the construction of the cave. Things progressed rapidly. Then the Armistice came. If it had been delayed a week, there would have been another escape at Motuhl.

After the Armistice, we were prisoners for four more months on the north island near Auckland, but were allowed visitors.

When the day on which we were to sail for home drew near, the president of the Soldiers' Mothers' league visited me and wished me a pleasant trip on behalf of the mothers of 80,000 soldiers. She said she came because New Zealand's sons who had been war prisoners in Germany had returned home in good health to their mothers. Therefore, she considered it her duty to pray God that I, too, might soon be restored to my mother's arms.

So at last we sailed away from New Zealand, "the land down under," where we had had the last of our adventures, enjoyed a few hardships, spent many weary and delightful hours, and met many hospitable and kindly people. On the whole, I have happy memories of the Antipodes.

In July of 1919 I stepped on German soil again and buried home. Just in time to pass a few weeks with my father, who died on September 3. The old warrior held steadfast in his faith in the Fatherland to the last. But to his dying hour he was filled with regret because his government would not let him take an active part in the Great war.

On January 3, 1920, all my men returned—that is, all save one. Their clothes were faded from the tropical sun and corroded by the sea water, but they returned without a stain upon either their honor or their loyalty.

The only gap in our ranks after those long adventures was the excellent Doctor Pletsch, our ship surgeon. The news of Germany's collapse reached the remote part of Chile where he was living. When he heard it, he fell dead of heart failure.

Returned to my beloved Fatherland. I found so many things changed and different from what I had hoped. In this connection, there is one memory always before me. It is my mother. I was sitting at her sick bed when even the doctors had given up hope. Only then did I realize how much I loved her, but I also realized with sorrow and regret how much more I should have done for her. Exactly the same feeling I have today when I find my country lying low. Never have I loved my home-land so much as now.
