Affect Weight and Strength
That age and health of the animal affect both the weight and strength of the fleece, as well as mutton production, is a fact carefully considered by the wool grower in culling his flock, says the Oregon experiment station. It is believed that length and density means less shrinkage after clipping. Fineness of fiber is also an important consideration.

Cyst formation of chicken is a condition which occurs occasionally in most any flock, and is not of an infectious nature, says the Oregon experiment station.

She Mixed the Plugs
Voice over the telephone: William Cass! Come home right away. I've mixed the plugs in some way; the radio is all covered with frost and the electric box is singing "Schultz is back again."

A Loaf of Bread
Just a loaf of bread! Most of us do not realize that the loaf that we accept from the baker today, as a matter of course, represents the latest step in the long climb of a industry that has developed from a craft as old as civilization itself. Today it is not made of crudely crushed grains and baked on hot stones but is scientifically mixed of as many as nine wholesome ingredients.

Nutritionally, bread is one of our most important foods. About half of every loaf is carbohydrates or in ordinary terms, starches and sugars, which are digested easily to supply the body with heat and energy of which we have great need. In addition to this, good bread contains milk, which aids the wheat in supplying protein, or the kind of food from which muscle tissue is made. Good white bread contains an amount of protein. Because of these two contributions to good nutrition, if for no other reason, bread should be served at every meal. It is a cereal food in its finest form, and about one-fifth of the diet should be of cereals.

just as much as Timber enjoyed themselves at the fights.

TO BE TAUGHT IMPORTANCE OF PARIS PACAT

University of Oregon, Eugene, August 29.—An intensive educational campaign to acquaint students of the United States with the far-reaching importance of the Paris Pacat will extend to high schools throughout Oregon, it is announced here by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon, who has been named a member of committee in charge by Arthur

Charles Watkins, director of the national student forum.

The principal and other faculty members of the Vernonia union high school will be asked to cooperate in the national project, and will be supplied with all information and literature necessary upon application, to the director whose address is 532 Seventeenth street, Washington, D. C., Dr. Hall states.

While the national student project is essentially for study and discussion, optional competitive features which include as a prize a trip to Europe next summer will be open to high schools taking part, it is stated. The project, which has for its aim the gaining of a better understanding of the important Paris Pact for the renunciation of war, has been enthusiastically endorsed by all leading educators, the prospects are that the study movement will be very successful, it is pointed out by Dr. Hall.

The awards competition will be based on a theme contest of 300 words on "how may the pact for the renunciation of war be made most effective?" and besides the trip to Europe, many state and local prizes will be offered.

To the first 800 high schools applying, a copy of Professor Shotwell's booklet, "The Renunciation of War" will be sent free of charge in addition to other material made available by various peace promotion agencies. High schools throughout Oregon are expected to take part in the national project, Dr. Hall states. "The Paris pact stands as one of the most important documents ever drawn, and it is our hope that this national program may place the facts before the public, so that an intelligent public opinion on the realities involved may be developed. We do not care what side or attitude is taken on the pact as long as the merits of the treaty are discussed openly and honestly."
