Why They Stay at 25

Rochester, N. Y .- Girls who do not marry before reaching the age of twenty-five stand an excellent cording to statistics made public here by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. At twenty, the figures show, a girl has a better chasce to marry than a man, but at twenty-five conditions are reversed. As the years increase, the tongues protrude from both, both have eyes, and both dart around with lightninglike rapidity. chances of marriage for the man increase, while those of the girl decrease, the record revealed.
