Attend Golden Rule Encampment at Portland, December 7th

Six members of the local I.
O. O. F. lodge attended the Golden Rule encampment of the Odd Fellows in Portland Saturday night, December 7.

Messrs Charley Holt, George Holt, Gilbert Holt, John Glass-ner, George Doughit, Robert Spencer, and Clint Kilbey were the members of the Golden Rule encampment of the Odd Fellows from Trehame that attended the meeting in Portland.

The Golden Rule encampment confers the three degrees of Odd Fellowship.

Hard Time Party Is Sponsored by C. E.
Evangelical Church

About 50 attended the hard time party sponsored by the Christian endeavor of the Evangelical church last Friday evening.

Many games were played and the party was declared one of most successful for many years.

Prior to the party, an election of officers for the ensuing year was held, and Edward Heath was elected president, Alice Dubendorf, vice president, Jack Marshall, secretary and Grace Condit, treasurer.

Aunt Sally Spencer was the guest of honor for the evening.
Pumpkin pie, sandwiches and cocoa were served those present.

When visiting in Portland read the Vernonia Eagle at the Seward hotel.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Soaking, steaming, or cooking stock feeds increases their digestibility slightly, but usually not enough to pay for the extra sense and work. When maximum gains are desired, cooking may encourage the animals to eat more feed.

According to available reports more than one-third of the annual farm slaughter of hogs takes place during one month—December. In some states more hogs are killed on farms in December than in all the packing-houses and other places where federal meat inspection is carried on.

Many farmers now carry fire protection through farmers' mutual fire insurance companies.
According to the latest figures available, about $10,000,000,000 worth of fire insurance is carried by these mutuals, at a low annual cost averaging 26 cents per $100 for the country as a whole.

When the calf is three weeks old, it should be given a little hay and grain. Clean, bright clover, alfalfa, or mixed hay is best. Alfalfa hay that is too leafy should not be fed to a very young calf. Corn, oats, wheat bran, and linseed meal are the best grains for a calf.

Shredded corn stover has about the same feeding value as un-shredded stover. It is better than timothy hay or straw for horses.
For bedding purposes, shredded stover is more valuable than straw, and much better than the long unshredded stover.

Failure to grade eggs is one reason why many farmers don't get higher average price per dozen for their eggs. When small and bad eggs are marketed with good ones the result is a lower price for all. If only a few eggs are obtained from a small flock, grading is less likely to be done than when the eggs are produced by a good-sized flock. A flock of 200 to 400 birds is particularly desirable, in order that the marketing of the eggs and also the management of the flock may be put on the most economical basis.

The time to buy feeder cattle depends on the system of feeding, the feeds used, and the quality of the cattle. If the lower grades of cattle are bought for immediate fattening in dry lot, it is generally better to buy in early fall, so as to get them marketed in late winter or early spring. The lower grades usually reach their peak prices before June, though steers of good quality and condition may sell to advantage a little later in the season. If cattle are to be finished on grass and there is sufficient roughage to carry them through the winter, fall is the time to buy. Buying feeders in the spring for finishing on grass the following summer should be limited to cattle that are fairly mature. Not much finish can be obtained on young growing cattle that are roughed through the winter and marketed off grass the following summer.

The husband may think he is boss, but if he gives money to relatives or needy strangers he is careful not to let his wife know about it.
