

Lumberjacks and Jills Prepare for Excitement of Longview Rolleo, August 8-9

Legends of Paul Bunyan, mightiest of mythical woodsmen, and recollections of last year's contests in the unparalleled Longview Rolleo festival hurl the challenge to the most daring, most skillful and strongest of the lumberjacks of the Pacific Northwest to again try their prowess on August 8-9, when the second annual two-day Rolleo will take place. A natural amphitheater around Lake Sacajawea will seat thousands. In illustration No. 1 above is S. A. Earnst, impersonator of the mighty Paul Bunyan. No. 2 is a group of Hoquiam veneer girls whose clothing is thin, pliable veneer peeling. No. 3 is Ann Melver of Longview, as Pauline Bunyan. She reigns until a successor is chosen August 8. No. 4, log-jousters hand at it in Lake Sacajawea. No. 5, Pete Hooper, of Kelso. 1929 Pacific Northwest champion, wearing the $250 belt awarded him. No. 6, a high-climber pauses in his last descent after clearing branches from a tall Douglas Fir in preparation for Rolleo contests. No. 7, log-rolling is not confined to lumberjacks. These are the northwest champions among women. No. 8, showing just how it's done as a roller loses his equilibrium on a fast spinning stick.
