County School Notes

Natal school received a lovely portfolio from Verbandrealschule, Thum, Erzgebirge, Germany. This is an answer to a portfolio sent a year ago to this country. The portfolio is beautifully made, part of it written in German and part of it in English as the German schools are now requiring that their pupils learn the English language.

erator looking for a future supply can also derive valuable information as to the yield to be expected year after year from Douglas fir stands.

The new bulletin is by R. E. McArdle and W H Meyer, foresters of the local forest experiment station staff.

Douglas fir makes up 66 per cent of the total timber stand of western Oregon and Washington. Inasmuch as the stand of virgin timber is by no means unlimited, says the Forest Service, the permanence of the lumber industry, which now contributes 65 per cent of the entire industrial payroll of the 2 states, hinges to a considerable degree upon the continued production of forest crops from lands chiefly suitable for this purpose. Ultimately the lumber production of the entire region must come from young or second growth stands. At least 15 million acres of land in western Oregon and Washington are estimated to be chiefly valuable for the continuous growing of crops of Douglas fir and its associates.

It is well known that the climate of the Douglas fir region is exceptionally favorable for the growth of conifers. The Douglas fir has a more marked ability than its associates to reestablish itself by natural means following fire or logging. As a result of most of the young forest stands in this region are comprised of 80 per cent or more of Douglas fir. It is also one of the three of four fastest growing American trees and, excepting redwood, produces the highest yield per acre.

At 30 years of age, Douglas fir may be as much as 12 inches in diameter and 90 feet in height. When the forest is 100 years old, most of the trees are two to three feet in diameter, and the larger trees are nearly 200 feet tall.

The results of this study are found in Technical Bulletin 201—T, "The Yield of Douglas Fir in the Pacific Northwest," which is available free on request at the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

NOW ALL I GOT TO DO IS RELAX, THEN START THE CLUB BACK WITH THE LEFT HAND ON AN INSIDE LINE, SHIFT WEIGHT TO THE RIGHT FOOT, KEEPING THE LEFT ARM STRAIGHT, AND BREAK THE WRISTS AT THE TOP OF THE BACKSWING WHEN THE CLUBHEAD SHOULD HAVE STRAIGHT DOWN—I BETTER LOOK AND SEE * THEN START THE DOWNSWING WITH THE LEFT HAND LEADING, AND THEN COME IN WITH A RIGHT-HANDED PUSH, AND THEN SHIFT THE WRIST TO THE LEFT SIDE, BRACING, AND THROWING THE CLUBHEAD AFTER THE BALL * AND KEEP THE EYE ON THE BALL * THAT'S ALL I GOT TO REMEMBER
