Viewpoints of History

History, as Voltaire thought, "is little more than a picture of human crimes and misfortunes," and Gibbon held the same opinion, expressed in almost the same words. The latter held that "the reign of Antonius is marked by the rare advantage of furnishing very few materials for history, which is indeed little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind."

Ingenious Hiding Places

The pilgrims of the Middle ages carried stout staffs instead of sticks. These staffs were useful not only in supporting weary limbs but also served to break the heads of belligerent wayfarers. Each had in its upper part a hollow tube for small treasures and coins. In such a tube, it is said, the first head of saffron was smuggled into England from Greece when to take the living plant out of the country was forbidden on pain of death; the silk-worm was conveyed into Europe in a similar way.

No Such Continent

The name "Continent of Lemuria" is given by Haeckel to a vast area assumed to exist in past ages over the area of the present Africa, Indian ocean and Malayan archipelago, on the hypothesis that the existence of such a continent was necessary to explain the peculiar present distribution of the lemurs and other phenomena of geographical distribution. The discovery of the remains of lemurs in America and Europe rendered such hypothesis futile and the idea was soon abandoned.

Reverse English!

Two students at William Jewell college (Florida) have relinquished their rights to joke about the absent-minded professor. It is reported one boy forgot and sent a letter intended for the girl he left behind to his parents while he mailed his laundry to the young lady. Another boy walked all the way from the dormitory to the post office with his laundry, but forgot to change the address card and in a few hours his laundry bag was specially delivered to him at his room.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Clever Imitations

Rare Chinese carvings in jade quartz, amethyst or other extremely hard substances, usually in the form of trees and flowers, the work of generations of orientals, and therefore extremely costly, have been cleverly imitated. Wires are wrapped with tinsel, glass leaves are made to imitate amethyst or jade, and glass beads are strung on the wires.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Moral Athletics

In politics it isn't enough to stand on your own record, you must jump on the other fellow's.—Boston Transcript.

East Indians Cling to Faith in Holy Stream

The Ganges, whose yellow waters whirl by Benares, becomes at this point a wider river than the Danube, and it is filled with all kinds of filth and uncleanness. Thousands bathe in it every morning and when the pilgrim festivals are occurring, hundreds of thousands. They crowd together so thickly on the flat banks that the pressing multitude conceals the water. All the filth of a big city is thrown into the stream. Bodies of animals and sewage are dumped here.

The holy river and the magic that flows in it are stronger than all western ideas. All the powerful, influential Hindu princes have palaces on the holy stream to which they can go when they feel death approaching. And every one of these princes has been educated in England. They are gentlemen in every respect except that they still remain Indians, that is to say, men who may have assimilated a complete European education but who none the less remain utterly foreign.

This is the only explanation why hundreds of thousands and even millions bathe in this dirty, disgusting water infested with every kind of germ, swallowing it as if it were able to heal every disease and cure all ills in spite of all the enlightenment and hygienic knowledge that has penetrated India in the last few decades.

Lines in This Portrait Are All Written Words

One of the strongest of all the oddities to be found in a city teeming with astonishing things is a portrait of John Wesley in the John Street Methodist church, "the cradle of American Methodism." It looks like an engraving, but at closer sight each "graven" line is seen to be a series of words in old English script. From the lower left hand corner of the portrait you trace each sweeping line, and when you have finished you have read a complete "Life of John Wesley."

The portrait was made by Gluck Rosenthal about 80 years ago, and in his fine hand you read quite clearly the famous sayings of Wesley: "The best of all is, God is with us," and "The world is my parish."

Goethe's Poetic Rank

John George Robertson, professor of German language and literature of the University of London, says that "as a lyric poet Goethe's supremacy is least likely to be challenged. He has given his nation, whose highest literary expression has in all ages been essentially lyric, its greatest songs. No other German poet has succeeded in attuning feeling, sentiment and thought so perfectly to the music of words as he; none has expressed so fully that subtle spirituality in which the strength of German lyricism lies."

Large Bird Houses

The largest individual bird house shown in available records is the one in the National Zoological park, Washington, which has 155 indoor cages and 22 outdoor cages, and was erected at a total cost of $132,000. The National Zoological park, however, does not have anywhere near the largest collection of birds, as the following figures will show: Washington, 350 species; Philadelphia, 500 to 600; New York, N. Y., 700; London, 1,000; Berlin, 1,000.—Washington Star.
