THE NEW DEAL

The one argument that stood out above all others in the election November 8 was the demand for a "new deal." Tariff, farm board, water power, prohibition, all sank into relative insignificance beside the desire to put new men into office, form new set-ups, and make a fresh start. Rightly or wrongly, a big majority of voters felt that the Republican administration had not done enough to get the country out of its economic plight, and that the Democrats should be given the chance to see what they could do. Add to that a preference for the glowing, genial personality of Roosevelt as contrasted with the restrained, business-executive type of personality of President Hoover, and an emotional response to the illustrious name that the Democratic nominee bears, and the minds of hosts of masses of erstwhile Republicans were made up. The rather monotonous but fully poised tones of Hoover as they came over the radio seemed appropriate in 1928, when the public was looking for a big business man to assure continuance of the pay envelope, but when the pay checks ceased, the more sympathetic voice of the man who promised to do something to get the job back had the chief appeal.

Irrespective of one's party affiliations, the "new deal" has indeed its promise of better things, not merely because a new president of a different political faith will be in the White House, but because the Democratic victory was complete. With control of both houses of Congress, the administration will be able to carry out a unified policy without bickering and fighting that were inevitable as long as the president was Republican, the lower house Democratic, and the senate Republican. After March 4 President Roosevelt and his advisers will have their opportunity, unhampered. The people have decided that they should have it, and the will of the people is supreme.

Ruth Skaling was a Vernonia shopper Thursday afternoon.

Buck: My brother thinks a football coach has four wheels. Kenneth: Ha ha! And how many wheels does the bally thing have?

Fred: Mother, you know that lovely purse you gave me for my birthday?

Mrs. Johnston: Yes dear! what of it?

Fred: It makes me feel orful to think of it just lyin' in the drawer 'thout a cent in its stomach.

Lucille: Yes, the doctors saved my life, but it cost me over a thousand dollars.

Cecilia: Oh! Lucille, what extravagance!

Mrs. Jones: Dear, your hands are frightfully dirty.

Howard: Not 'frightfully', mother. A lot of that's shading.

Helen: No! I can't give you another dance. But I'll introduce you to the prettiest girl in the room!

Albert: But I don't want to dance with the prettiest girl in the room. I want to dance with you!

A young fellow wrote to his father from college: "No mo, no fun, your son."

Promptly his father answered: "How sad, too bad, your dad."

—WE WONDER—

Who is going to teach Howard to type . . . Why Cecilia and Ruth are so inquisitive . . . Why Edith and Helen like Armistice so well . . . Why Lucille was so worried about her notebook . . . Why Kenneth has been so quiet since Halloween . . . If Cecilia brought a fruit cake to basketball practice . . . How Ruth likes to ride in a roadster with four in it?

Helping Each Other

A community can often be judged by its utility service. Good public utility service is essential to the growth and expansion of any town or city.

●In turn, the prosperity of the utility is dependent upon the cities and towns it serves. This interdependence serves at once to develop both.

●Naturally we try to give you the best possible service, for it is only by helping you that we can help ourselves. We want our service to you to be of such a high standard that we will be looked upon as a welcome part of the daily life and activity of your community.
