TEN MOST OUTSTANDING ACCOMPLISHMENTS NAMED

What he considers the 10 greatest single accomplishments of the Oregon Agricultural experiment station have been listed by Dr. W. A. Schoenfeld, present director of the station who joined the state college staff but recently and hence had no connection with the work he lists as most outstanding. Here is his list which necessarily omits many achievements others might place at the top:

1. Discovery of a method of removing spray residue from fruit. This emergency achievement saved Oregon's crops in the crises and is now standard the world over.

2. Discovery of the cause and control of infectious abortion in cattle. The "Oregon System" of control put this state in the front rank in this vital work.

3. Introduction of Federation wheat. This variety, which averages from two to five bushels above others, is now the most widely grown wheat in the entire northwest.

4. Development of the system of breeding poultry for egg idea produced the first 300 egg hen and started Oregon's poultry industry.

5. Discovery of life history and control of the codling moth under Oregon conditions. This pioneer work by Dean A. B. Cordley was forerunner of subsequent disease and pest control work that makes commercial fruit growing possible.

6. Development of the Oregon small seed industry through introduction by the station.

7. Improvement of old summer fallow methods in eastern Oregon. This improved system is credited with increasing yields about six bushels per acre.

8. Control of liver flukes in sheep and goats. The station found the snail alternate hosts of the flukes and devised means of eradicating them.

9. Discovery of the value of sulphur as a fertilizer. On alfalfa and other legumes a many Oregon soils hay yields were increased a ton or more per acre.

10. Discovery of a new and simple method of fowl pox control. A new system of vaccination makes unnecessary further losses from this devastating poultry disease.

Dr. Schoenfeld selected these from scores of others listed in a new condensed report on agricultural research accomplishments said to return 10 to 15 million dollars a year to the state. More than 300 problems are now under investigation and more than 100 others requested have been discontinued or not started for lack of funds.
