ANNE SHANNON MONROE ADDRESSES STUDY CLUB

Anne Shannon Monroe of Lake Grove, Oregon, nationally beloved author of "Singing in the Rain" and nine other books was the speaker at the Vernonia study club's annual guest day luncheon given in the guest house Thursday, May 9.

Miss Monroe talked in an informal and delightfully humorous manner on how she got into the writing game. She told of her unique childhood, when she displayed an early interest in writing by dramatizing stories of people she knew. When in a peevish humor she worked off her tantrums by writing the most terrible things about people who annoyed her, she declared.

Miss Monroe described in detail the writing of her first novel and how she was successful in having it published in Chicago. She told of her trials in getting a position on a newspaper, and recounted her experiences in magazine writing, telling of her meeting with Theodore Dreiser in New York.

Miss Monroe said she had writ-
