OREGON VETERANS WARNED AGAINST "BONUS RACKETS"

Oregon veterans are warned to be on the look out for schemes designed to trick them out of their bonus money according to a release today by the Portland Better Business Bureau.

For months, the report states, the racketeers, the slickers and the fake stock promoters have been devising ways and means of separating three and one half million people from two and a half billion dollars of adjusted service pay. Old rackets are being dusted off and new ones created by the bunco men who hope to "cash-in" on this unprecedented distribution of funds.

It is pointed out that every veteran now becomes a "prospect" in the card index of the "get-rich-quick promoter and every known lure of quick riches and easy money will be employed in the urgent sales efforts of these business charlatans.

Particularly the veterans are urged to be wary of the "hurry-up" tactics that will be used by many of these unscrupulous promoters, for in most cases questionable deals are put over by the promoter who insists that the victim act at once, thus avoiding the possibility of an investigation that will reveal the fraud or the unsound elements in the proposition.

As a safe guard against becoming involved in losses through schemes of doubtful character, it is suggested that veterans investigate unknown offerings or deals presented by strangers through the Better Business Bureau, the Chamber of Commerce in their locality or their bank and they are advised to promptly report any bonus rackets that come to their attention.
