Big Airport Which San Francisco Will Build

First official sketch of San Francisco's great new municipal airport, to be opened in 1940 at Yerba Buena Shoals. The 430-acre site, now under reclamation by army engineers, will be the scene of the Golden Gate International exposition in 1939. Part of the exposition program is the construction of the three permanent structures shown in this oil painting—the Administration building, embodying the most modern design and equipment of aeronautical engineering, and the two hangars. The three buildings, financed by PWA grants, will cost more than $1,600,000.

BROADCASTS POLL

Because of the unusual interest in the Presidential campaign this year, P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber company, has completed arrangements to broadcast three times weekly the result of the Literary Digest Presidential poll. "Of course, we are not in politics," Mr. Litchfield said in announcing the series of broadcasts. "However, we believe people will be greatly interested in getting information on the progress of the poll more frequently than it has been available in the past. So far as the results themselves are concerned, the broadcasts will be completely impartial and based entirely on the Digest's own tabulation of the returns."
