

Cooperation from Hunters Asked by U.S. Foresters

The period of forest fire danger is not yet over throughout Oregon, according to an appeal to hunters, just issued by the U. S. forest service. Heavy rains have occurred on the west side, except in southwest Oregon counties. Elsewhere in the state there have been sprinkles to light rains. This, however, has not been sufficient to wet down forest areas which have been subjected to the long summer dry spell, and the woods are still inflammable, say the foresters.

Pointing out that weather predictions are for drying conditions, they ask sportsmen to exercise extreme care in smoking, and in extinguishing campfires, especially in eastern and southwestern Oregon.

Because of the fire hazard, some forest areas are still closed. In Oregon, areas closed to all use including hunting are Mount Hood national forest, Oregon City watershed on the Clackamas river, 15,300 acres, and Mud creek area, 3,200 acres; Willamette national forest, Seven Mile hill area on South Fork Santiam river, 7,580 acres, Portland Creek burn area, 19,880 acres, and South Fork McKenzie river, west bank, 8,960 acres. Permits to enter are required, and will be granted, on additional areas on the Deschutes, Mount Hood, Rogue River, Siskiyou, Siuslaw, Umatilla and Willamette national forests; while some areas on the Deschutes, Milheur, Umatilla and Willamette are closed to smoking. Details as to closed areas and required permits can be obtained from local forest supervisors or rangers.

On all areas open for camping campfire permits will be required up to September 30. Every camper, except those stopping at designated and posted campgrounds, must be equipped with a shovel, at least 36 inches long, 8-inch blade; axe, 26 inches long, 2-pound head; water container, 1 gallon. This rule of no smoking while traveling in forest, brush or grassland, except on surfaced highways, also should be carefully observed.

These simple rules of good woods-manship are observed by the majority of sportsmen and forest visitors, according to the forest service. They ask the cooperation of all good

RIGHT OUT OF THE AIR

By EARLE FERRIS

CLAUDETTE COLBERT, pictured below, starred with Cary Grant in the comedy hit "The Awful Truth" when Lux Radio Theatre returned to the air for its sixth year on September 11. Cecil B. De Mille continues as director of the Hollywood dramatic hour.

With his "We, the People" show on the air throughout the summer, Gabriel Heatter has had to pick up brief holiday weekends at his summer place at Freeport, L. I., and at Candlewood Lake in Connecticut instead of taking a long motor trip as has been his custom.

Roger Pryor, pictured here, whose round of activity on stage, screen and orchestral podium has made him especially fitted for the job, has taken over the emcee reins of the "Screen Guild Show" over CBS on Sunday, September 24.

Fred Allen contemplates a brand new feature for his new "Town Hall Tonight" program when it returns to the NBC airwaves on Wednesday, October 4.

Charlie McCarthy returned to the Chase and Sanborn Hour from his south sea island vacation on September 17, after a good seasoning under the tropical Hawaiian sun.

Edward G. Robinson, pictured here, is now being heard for the third successive year as the crusading newspaper managing editor on "Big Town" over CBS Tuesday nights. He is supported by Ona Munson in the role of "Lorelei," society reporter.

Jack Benny with the dusky Rochester will go into a new motion picture soon after the opening of the Jack Benny radio series over NBC on Sunday, October 8.

Few radio script writers combine their chores with acting. One of the rare exceptions is Nora Stirling, shown here, who pens "Meet Miss Julia." She was an expert actress before turning author and she has written a role for herself in her daytime serial.

citizens in carrying the very small minority of careless forest users, who do not observe these rules, and thereby jeopardize forests, streams, camping grounds and game.

Eagle Items Of Past Years

ONE YEAR AGO— J. E. Tapp purchased the wood distributor business owned by E. H. Washburn and was to assume control the first of October.

Interference Still Faces Station KOAC

Adverse Preliminary Ruling Favors Granting of Wavelength to KOY

Word of an adverse preliminary ruling but one which leaves the way open for final arguments before, and action by, the Federal Communications commission has just been received by those in charge of the fight by radio KOAC to prevent sharing its favorable wavelength with an Arizona commercial station.

The further action in the KOY-KOAC case in Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions, proposes to confirm a previous examiner's findings favoring granting the right to KOY.

Statement is made in the preliminary finding that operation of KOY on the KOAC wavelength would not increase objectionable interference within existing good service areas. Contrary to this, the electrical engineering department at O.S.C. has taken actual measurements which, according to testimony introduced by KOAC, show that interference to this state-owned station would be increased more than 2000 per cent after sundown, and that the night good service area would be reduced to approximately 1 per cent of the total area containing less than 5 per cent of the population.

Those in charge of the KOAC fight, headed by L. R. Breithaupt, special representative of the board and the college, have taken steps to argue the case further when it comes before commission members personally for final consideration.
