News of the Theatre

MUSICIAN BLASTS WAY TO LEADING COMEDY PART—

Stories of financial wizards who have pyramided a few thousand dollars into millions are common, but there is a man in Hollywood who has run a 20-cent mouth organ into the leading comedy role in a Paramount picture!

He is Britt Wood, internationally known harmonica artist, who appears in the new Hopalong Cassidy picture Range War, starring William Boyd and opening Saturday at the Joy Theatre.

Wood began playing the instrument when he was four years old and shocked his mother when she discovered him helping ballyhoo a side show at a carnival in Columbia, Tennessee, when he was not yet eight.

PEPPER KID CAPABLE SINGER AND MIMIC—

When he was two years old, Tommy Bond had a repertoire of 24 popular songs. The young actor, featured at the Joy Theatre Saturday with Edith Fellows in Columbia's Five Little Peppers and How They Grew, has since greatly enlarged his musical repertoire. He accompanies each song with an impersonation of the original singer.

THESE ACTORS WERE REAL FIRE FIGHTERS—

Fire fighting equipment from the hugh Santa Fe Spring oil field was used for the oil well fire scenes in Blackmail, starring Edward G. Robinson at the Joy Theatre.

The regular crew of six trained men under Harry Whittaker, one of California's two oil well shooters, donned asbestos suits, gloves, helmets and special fireproof shoes and moved with Robinson and Guinn (Big Boy) Williams right up to within a few feet of the 150-foot fire.

Six streams of water from Los Angeles and Culver City fire departments were turned on the fighters as well as on derricks and other surrounding property. An active oil field of 300 wells was used as background for the thrilling scenes.

SMILEY INVENTS QUEER GADGETS BETWEEN SCECNETS

Between films, Smiley Burnette, genial comedian who is currently appearing in support of Gene Autry in Republic's super-western In Old Monterey, showing at the Joy Theatre, Tuesday, spends a good share of his time in inventing some new contraption to amuse his fans in forthcoming pictures. Several of his inventions which are usually in the musical line have been patented for Burnette.

One in particular, a small wooden cutout figure of Burnette which opens Thursday at the Joy Theatre, is the last graduate of the Federal Theatre Project to be given a chance for fame and fortune in Hollywood.

MILLION DOLLAR LEGS FEATURES BETTY, JACK—

Those scrappy newlyweds, Betty Grable and Jackie Coogan, who have patched things up again, appear together for the second time in the hilariously funny comedy Million Dollar Legs, which arrives next Tuesday at the Joy Theatre. In the picture, though, it's John Hartley who has the key to Betty Co-ed's heart.

Differing refreshingly from previous college films, Million Dollar Legs, is the humorous and well-knit story of youth revolting against the benevolent despotism of a liberal donor who runs the college because of his fat contributions.

BRENDA MARSHALL WPA THEATRE GRAD—

Brenda Marshall, co-starred with Joel McCrea in Espionage Agent, the Warner Brothers picture opening Thursday at the Joy Theatre, is the last graduate of the Federal Theatre Project to be given a chance for fame and fortune in Hollywood.

Miss Marshall obtained her first legitimate role in a Federal Theatre production of George Bernard Shaw's On the Rocks, which closed in New York last December.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER IS REPRINTED WORD FOR WORD AS RECEIVED—

Vernonia, Oregon
Oct. 31,—39

Mr. Harry King.

Just a few lines to find out what you are trying to pull off with your customers you have close down on quite a few of them. Well Harry why dont you keep your word on your notices that you send some of your customers that you give them credit - that all the men or customers that was not working you wouldnt carry them on your books. Well why dont you keep your word and shut down on all your customers that dont work and those you still let have credit. Harry its rummer around that you make the remark that the CIO men could get relief and the AFL couldnt get relief so you were going to give them credit. So Harry is that business. Well Harry I am afraid those letter that you wrote to your customers are putting you on the spot and the way thing look now after every thing is settled you wont have many customers. So if you still want to run your store you better stop this rummer if what is say around town. This is not a letter from one of your customers where I trade they treat you right and try and do what right one of your customers just show me the letter you wrote him. You turn me down once on credit but will never have the chance to turn me down again.

The tone and composition of this letter need no comment with the exception of the charge of favoritism being shown the A. F. of L. which is not true.
