By EARL SNELL, Secretary of State

Oregon pedestrian fatalities during the month of November showed a reduction of 14 per cent from the toll for the same month a year ago, Earl Snell, secretary of state revealed today. Twelve persons were killed this November, compared to 14 a year ago.

Pointing to the fact 41 per cent of the pedestrians killed were walking with traffic instead of facing it, Snell urged persons who walk on the highways to face traffic so that they can see approaching cars. "It is exceedingly dangerous to walk on the right side of the highway where cars are coming from your rear, especially at night or in bad weather," he said. "Always walk on the left hand side, facing traffic, and step off the pavement when cars approach."

All told, 66 per cent of the pedestrians killed during November were committing some imprudent action such as crossing intersections diagonally, jaywalking, stepping from between parked cars or playing in the roadway.

Persons over 40 years of age constituted 58 per cent of pedestrian fatalities during the month and 38 per cent of the pedestrian injuries were persons under 24 years of age.

With the exception of January and September when 13 pedestrians were killed each month, November had more pedestrian fatalities than any other month this year.
