The Forum

To the Editor: Some time ago Mr. George Baslington, of Vernonia, living in the vicinity of Treharne unearthed some bones of a prehistoric animal which is now on display at the barber shop of N. Soden, in Vernonia. According to Mr. Baslington he first came upon these specimens while digging a well and later submitted one of them to Oregon State College, Department of Geology for classification and determination.

There were also living in the United States four other types of mammoths, one of which included the great hairy mammoth which lived in the north in the vicinity of the great ice sheets. The animal living to the north of the United States and in northern Siberia possessed a thick undercoat of wool and an outside coat of hair 18 or more inches in length. This type has been found preserved complete in fossil gravels in Alaska and Siberia.

In point of time, the mammoth belongs exclusively to the post-Tertiary or Pleistocene age or epoch, and it was undoubtedly contemporaneous with man in France and probably elsewhere. For a long period of time the tusks of the mammoth, when ranged upwards of ten feet in length, and in a fine state of preservation, has been a regular export product from the upper reaches of Siberia, both eastward to China and westward to Europe, and in the middle of the 10th century an active trade was carried on at Khiva in fossil ivory, which was made into combs, vases and other objects.

Mr. Baslington states that more of the skeleton of this huge prehistoric mammal was not taken out in the excavation, and if unearthed, probably would lead to a more comprehensive study of its size and classification. Lester Sheeley
