

Fisherman's Luck Topic Of Poem

Sardines Are the Result of Day's Effort for Nimrod

The poem following is one contributed to The Eagle this week. The topic is that of a fisherman whose effort for the day results in not one single catch.

THE FISHERMAN

The fisherman, one summer day,
Went to the river in his old Chevrolet.
He took his pole, and some hooks,
and a line;
The fish, for others, were biting
very fine.
He fished in the morning, and he
fished at noon,
And he said, "I ought'a catch
one pretty soon!"
But the day wore on, and the sun
sank low,
'Till pretty soon it was time to go.
So he came home and pulled out of his "jeans"
A can that was labeled—"Sardines!"

Darlene Warren, Portland, Oregon admires the registered Jersey bull calf Coronation Remulus Ius which was donated by Mr. C. W. Sherman, Jersey breeder, St. Helens, Oregon, to be awarded to the holder of the lucky number at the Brownsmead Dairy meeting in Clatsop County, Tuesday evening, March 5. Only dairymen from Clatsop and Columbia Counties and their families were permitted to draw. The calf was given to stimulate interest in better dairy cattle for the community. He was selected from the Sherman herd by T. R. Warren, Portland, Oregon, western representative of the American Jersey Cattle Club.
