ROMERO IS GAL CABALLERO AGAIN IN "VIVA CISCO KID"

The Cisco Kid gallops back from the border with his guns blazing to prove once again he's still the most dashing caballero of them all!

Handsome Cesar Romero, who first played Cisco in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady" is again the colorful O. Henry outlaw—barking guns, flashing eyes, romantic heart and all—in "Viva Cisco Kid," the 20th Century-Fox production which is coming to the Joy Theatre on Tuesday.

Cisco is chased by a posse, accused of murder, trapped in a mine cave-in and left for dead by the West's toughest hombre—but it's all in the name of Romance!

"YOUNG AS YOU FEEL" IS MERRIEST ESCAPE

We've been through a lot of hilarious predicaments with the Jones Family, but when they all get that young feeling and decide to take over Broadway in "Young As You Feel," the latest of the 20th Century-Fox comedies which comes to the Joy Theatre Tuesday, they fit a new laugh high. For Dad turns playboy, mother goes glamour girl and all the Joneses step out in style.

Dad Jones decides to give up his drug store at the persuasion of his famous family, and they all go to New York to give the hot spots a whirl. The whole family, with the exception of Dad, who has to pay the bills, is taken in by some phony friends of Jack, the oldest son. Posed as bluebloods and members of the nobility, they are out to take the Joneses for all they can, and how nearly they succeed must be seen to be appreciated.

ELECTRICITY USERS NEED CANDLES ALSO

Although 20th Century-Fox studios may use in the course of a single production enough electricity to light the average small town, they still are one of the largest consumers of candles in the country. In Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Little Old New York," for example more than 3,800 tapers were used. At the Joy Theatre Friday with Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce featured, "Little Old New York" is a robust, rollicking romance of the old New York waterfront and Robert Fulton's invention of the steamboat.

LORRE STARRED IN HORROR ROLE

"Island of Doomed Men," new Columbia film due Wednesday at the Joy Theatre, presents Peter Lorre in one of the strangest roles the famous portrayer of unbalanced mentalities has ever had. Lorre is starred as a psychopathic tyrant who rules a group of paroled convicts and forces them to work his diamond mine. Rochelle Hudson plays his wife, upon whom Lorre also practices a form of refined cruelty. Other familiar figures in the drama, include Robert Wilcox, George E. Stone, Charles Middleton and Stanley Brown. Charles Barton directed the production.

"MAN WITH 9 LIVES" OPENS HERE SOON

Boris Karloff stars in the weird and fascinating horror-film, Columbia's "The Man With Nine Lives," due to open Wednesday at the Joy Theatre. Central figure of the thrilling drama is a ruthless scientist, portrayed by Karloff, who returns to life after being in a state of "frozen sleep" for ten years. As soon as he is restored, the scientist embarks on a ruthless series of experiments in his underground laboratory which result in the snuffing out of five lives. Roger Pryor and Jo Ann Sayers are featured in the new film which was directed by Nick Grinde.
