If the shoulder is soft, a quick swerve may overturn the car. Instead, let the car run until you have it under perfect control. Then swing back on the pavement.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

(Continued from page 1) by the glass, drastically curtail the sale of fortified wines, and almost bar the sale of any wine except Oregon made products.

A nice keen-edged anti-chain banking bill is in the making and probably will see the light of day next week. The measure will have considerable support and may cause the chain bankers real grief. Here is another bill that passed the house last session only to meet death in the senate. About 28 representatives had their names on the measure, and the same tactics will be tried this session with a flock of senatorial names added for good effect.

Observations: Harvey Wells always makes the motion to adjourn . . . The new Oregon code is causing Blaine McCord, chief clerk of legislation and rules committee, many headaches . . . Earl Hill, a former member of the house, is here on the side of bigger and better trucks . . . Rumor has it that Robert Thornton of Tillamook will be appointed to serve out the unexpired term of Jack Caufield, resigned, who will be the new postmaster in that city February 1 . . . Ralph Cake, Republican national committeeman, talks a little politics with the boys . . . Marion county lawmakers are coming in for good natured ribbing because that county voted thumbs down on the legislators increase in pay bill by the largest margin of any county in the state . . . Monroe Sweetland, secretary of Commonwealth Federation, is buzzing around the lobby busy as a bee—pensions.
