Census Shows Sanctuaries Game Increase Set for Fish

All classes of game show a substantial increase on the national forests of Oregon, according to the 1940 game census estimates prepared by the U. S. Forest Service. The trend in numbers of blacktailed deer appears to be on the upgrade for the first time in many years. "The mild open winter of 1939-40, followed by favorable spring and fall seasons made green grass available in eastern Oregon throughout the greater part of the year," says L. H. Douglas, assistant regional forester in charge of wildlife and range management.

Browse Use Excessive

Douglas states that even with the unusual amount of green feed available during the past two mild winters, the utilization of browse has been excessive on some ranges and heavy losses of game are certain during severe winters. The large concentrations of mule deer found on parts of the Malheur forest in previous years were not so evident last winter but increased numbers appeared on the Ochoco forest and on other areas of the Malheur not ordinarily free of snow.

The rounded estimates for the national forests of Oregon show 140,000 mule deer; 37,000 black-tailed deer; 100 whitetailed deer; 1,300 Roosevelt elk; 23,000 Rocky Mountain elk; 1,900 antelope; and 5,900 black bears.

Range Extended

Summer elk ranges on the Whitman and Umatilla forests are overpopulated as indicated by the condition of the principal forage species used by elk. Further reductions in numbers are necessary if a reasonable population of elk is to be maintained. Elk have greatly extended their range in eastern Oregon during the past few years.

As might be expected, the census estimates show increases of many predator animals. Bobcats are estimated at 9,400; cougars, 800; coyotes, 35,000. Most of the cougars are reported west of the Cascade Mountains.

Authentic reports have been received that the small band of mountain sheep still exists in the Wall-owa Mountains.

The abrasive effect on tires caused by rapid starting and stopping and rounding curves at high speed is one of the main reasons for abnormal tire wear, according to the Emergency Road Service of the Oregon State Motor Association.

In order to establish sanctuaries where fish may spawn and hatch, the Oregon State Game Commission at its meeting last Saturday, set deadlines above which angling will not be permitted until June 1.

This action was taken under new powers granted the commission under Senate Bill No. 147, passed in the recent session of the legislature and made in the interest of conservation.

Rock Creek Included

Deadlines have been established on the Nestucca river above Fifth bridge; on the Siletz river above the bridge crossing the Toledo-Siletz highway; on the Umpqua river above Marsters bridge; on the Nehalem river above the confluence of Rock creek; on Rock Creek itself upstream from a point 200 feet below the dam; on Salmon river above Rose Lodge and on the Necanicum above the coast highway bridge just below the Necanicum hatchery.

No angling will be permitted above these deadlines until June 1.

Low Humidity Closes Camp

TIMBER—(Special to The Eagle)—Remus Branson returned home from Hillsboro last Thursday night with a 1941 Plymouth coupe.

Because of low humidity, Standard Logging company camp closed at 2 p. m. last Thursday. Thanks to the weather man, it started to rain Monday afternoon.

Style Leadership Won By U. S. In 1941

FASHIONS of American origin for 1941 show definitely that this country's designers are assuming the important role of giving America style leadership. This leadership also is apparent in the design of the 1941 Frigidaire electric refrigerator shown in the picture.

Here a striking summer print with many notable features is shown at the left. Sprawling gaily over a bright blue background of heavy crepe is a white conventionalized flower pattern. Shoulders sheer abruptly into loose dolman sleeves nipped at the waist. There is no belt, but two large self covered buttons do double duty in nipping the waistline and supporting the intricately draped front of red crepe. The underarm pouch bag has a transparent end of plastic galalith. The hostess, center, wears a brilliantly designed casual dress. A skirt of fire engine wool jersey is draped suspender fashion over a navy blue silk jersey top. Worn over it is a straw jerkin striped in red and blue.

The other visitor, into whose glass the hostess is placing an ice cube, is wearing a dress illustrating another trend. This chaireuse coat dress is made of thin wool with piping of a darker color down one side of the "V" neck. Sloping shoulders, padded to hold their shape, are cut all in one with the bodice. Only ornament on the dress is a two toned, semi-military chevron on one sleeve. The hat is a built up pill box of looped yellow straw, with a fine, black chantilly veil flowing over the shoulders.
