New Fashions Are "All-American"

SPRING styles this year have their origin in the creative talents of American designers. The 1941 Frigidaire electric refrigerator shown in the picture also is the work of designers in this country.

The hostess, on the left, is wearing a dress equally appropriate for preparing a family dinner or for lunching at the country club. Flame colored ratine panels start under the arms and sculpture the bust and waist. The same color dominates the motif applied on the white center panel. Next to the hostess is a visitor wearing a black silk print sprinkled with military insignia in white. A pleated skirt matches the dropped pleated sleeves. Despite the sloping effect, sleeves are still padded. The green bag and bonnet match the gros-grain bow and hip pipings.

Clearly saying "1941", the new spring suit worn by the second visitor is of men's wear wool, in grey with white stripes. Softly padded, gently sloping shoulders minimize a waistline gently nipped by smoke pearl buttons. The straight skirt has a center front pleat defined by bias bands of material. Both bag and hat are grey straw in the same tone as the softly tailored blouse. Lattice bands of felt in back prevent the hat from taking flight. Sulphur yellow gloves, softly crushed at the wrist, provide the only note of color contrast.

Hoerles Are Parents—

A baby boy, Robert Lee, was born to the George Hoerles on March 37 at the Forest Grove General hospital. The baby weighed 7 1/2 pounds.
