Oregon Resources Need Protection

Two of Oregon's great resources, her timberland and her wheatfields, both of them vitally important to winning the war, today stand in danger of destruction by fire, unless every citizen of Oregon joins wholeheartedly into the campaign to prevent forest fires and fires along roadsides, said Dean Johnson, state chairman of the Keep Oregon Green campaign.

"We have been stressing fire prevention in our forests all spring, with outstanding results so far," chairman Johnson pointed out, "but now that our great acreages of wheat in eastern Oregon are ripening, they offer a great potential danger zone for fires. Now, more than ever, we must ask that every citizen become a fire warden. Flipping of cigarettes from cars into dry roadside grass could cause a devastating fire in wheatlands, and wheat today is needed for a United Nation victory."

Officials Commended

"State highway officials, and many county officials, are to be commended for the program of cutting tall grass along roadways," Johnson continued. "The boys and girls of Oregon have responded in splendid style by joining in the Green Guard, fire prevention campaign, and it is not too much for us to ask every adult to likewise do everything within his power to see that he does not cause a fire."

"Those of our citizens who take the complacent attitude that sabotage will not get into our forests and farm areas to start fires, had better look back to mid-June when a Jap submarine shelled our Oregon shores," Johnson emphasized. "Anything can happen here. It is the better part of wisdom to be forewarned and forearmed."

News of the Theatre

ACTORS PREFER SPORTS

That the actors who work in westerns are really as tough and athletic as they appear to be on the screen was proved by a poll taken during the production of "Cowboy Serenade," a Republic picture.

A sports reporter, querying all the male performers as to what their favorite sports were, found that all of them preferred the strenuous games. Football was the favorite of nearly all, with handball running a close second.

CELTIC RULER IN STAR'S TREE

Among the most blue-blooded of the British colony in Hollywood is Wendy Barrie, who plays the feminine lead in Republic's "Public Enemies."

On her mother's side Wendy is a direct descendant of the ancient Irish king Brian Boru. On her father's side she is related to Sir Richard Warren, a surgeon of the King, and Cosmo Hamilton, a famous novelist.

Wendy was brought up in a typical Mayfair background and has traveled extensively throughout the world, but America is her favorite country and she is determined on making it her permanent home.

RAIN IS EXPENSIVE

Rain is an expensive business in Hollywood.

During the filming of Paramount's "Hold Back the Dawn," the Charles Boyer-Olivia de Havilland-Paulette Goddard starring vehicle, it rained for three days straight, disrupting shooting schedules and threatening the eight-acre set on which a whole Mexican village had been constructed.

Paramount had to rent the $20,000 tarpaulin used in the football season to protect the Los Angeles Stadium and stretch it from guy ropes over the entire set.

DON'T SHOOT—WRITE!

William Boyd, who, as "Hopalong" Cassidy, stars in "Twilight on the Trail," is losing his identity and can't figure a way to remedy the situation.

An average of 400 fan letters a day arrive at the Paramount studios in Hollywood for Boyd. Of these, at least 300 are always addressed simply "Hopalong Cassidy, Hollywood, California."

PICNIC IS PERILOUS

Nell O'Day and Anne Nagel, feminine leads in Universal's "Stagecoach Buckaroo" will never use the phrase "more fun than a picnic" again. The two actresses set out for a picnic in the film and get into lots of trouble when they are kidnapped by stagecoach bandits. Johnny Mack Brown is the star of the fast-moving action drama, which also features Fuzzy Knight, Herbert Rawlinson, and other favorites.

Telephone Company Contribution Great

A mountain of precious war materials, 35,500 tons of lead, 29,000 tons of iron and steel, 29,500 tons of copper, 650 tons of zinc, 540 tons of crude rubber, and large amounts of other scarce materials vitally needed in war efforts—this is the annual contribution required of the telephone industry of America by the War Production Board in its recent Order No. L-50. This conservation measure limiting the use of scarce and critical material by the telephone industry is going to be felt not only by that impersonal something known as "The Telephone Company" but by every home, factory, and office which uses telephone service.

Briefly, Order No. L-50 proposes to accomplish this saving of war materials by forbidding (except in certain instances) the erection of new telephone lines, installation of new telephone service connections or extension phones, replacement of present wall phones by handsets, and by placing many restrictions on the enlargement or improvement of telephone plants and equipment.

Conserve, Reuse Equipment

The hardworking telephone lineman and installer is ordered to conserve or reuse existing telephone equipment and facilities, and to repair parts which normally would be discarded and replaced by new parts, whenever such conservation or reuse will reduce the use of scarce materials. This new responsibility is in addition to the valuable service the telephone worker is already doing in helping provide telephone service for military and war production purposes.

The businessman and householder is expected to cooperate in various ways. He will have to get along (until the war is won) without that handy extension phone. He may have to be content with party line service when he would prefer a main line. There may be delays in filling orders for telephone installations, changes, moves of telephones or repair and restoration of service when it has been interrupted by storm or other causes.

Both the public and the telephone companies are ready to fill Uncle Sam's order, realizing that telephone systems are chiefly built of the same material that is used for shells, bullets, bombs, tanks, and planes for our war against the Axis.

Columbia Bicycle Quota Is 12

Oregon OPA headquarters today was advised by Washington, D. C., that twice as many adult bicycles could be rationed by the local war price and rationing boards during the month ahead, as were available this month. The August reserve quota is six times greater than the July reserve.

The August quota for Multnomah county alone, approaches the entire state quota for July.

The August state quota is 684 bicycles, with 240 more in the state reserve. The July quota was 332, with 40 in the reserve.
