

Bread Found No Longer Sliced

By this time all those people who buy their bread have discovered, if they did not already know, that bread is no longer sliced and have therefore begrudgingly brought forth their bread knives, if they happen to possess such type of knife and, in many cases, attempted for the first time to acquire the delicate art of cutting bread.

Be that as it may, Robert Massey proprietor of the local bakery says eliminating bread slicing, as ordered by the government, cuts down on noise, saves some electricity, and a little labor. All in all, it doesn't make a great deal of difference.

Neither does Mr. Massey object to the order requiring the enriching of all bread. In fact, he said he was glad to do that. All the bakery's yeast-raised products are now vitamin-enriched.

Three Violate Law

Three arrests for violation of the motor vehicle laws resulted Saturday when State Patrolman R. W. Wheeler and Holly Holcomb stopped a series of automobiles in the center of town that noon. Buddy Borton pleaded guilty to the charge of having no car license. George O. Summers and Rollin T. Spaulding were each guilty of possessing no operator's license. All three were fined $2.50 and costs.

Cold Weather Curtails Activities

Both cold weather and snow during the past few days have curtailed logging operations, and camps will open when more favorable weather comes. The Oregon-American mill shut down Wednesday night, but has enough logs to reopen Monday, Judd Greenman said Wednesday.

Unusually cold weather also caused many frozen and broken water pipes, not to mention auto radiators. Lowest official temperature was 1 degree during the morning of January 18. Lower temperatures were reported in other parts of town than the figure from the Corey hill weather station. Maximum temperature that day was 23 degrees.

On January 16 five inches of snow was recorded and the temperature ranged from 26 to 35 degrees. This snow melted at a depth of approximately two inches and a few flakes were added Tuesday night. On January 17 temperature range was from 8 to 29 degrees; and on January 19, 13 to 32 degrees.

An humorous part of the cold spell was the cap atop Walter Kent's head. He claims he has possessed this piece of double-lengthed headgear for 39 years.

Farm WAR NEWS

Farms Get War Ratings

Reclassification by local draft boards of farm operators and workers as essential under the war units plan is proceeding throughout the state. Individual farm war ratings, as determined by the farm plans and work sheets for 1943 now being made for every farm, will be used by county war boards to assist local draft boards in completing the reclassification. The increasingly serious farm labor problem is getting a lot of attention in Washington these days. Secretary Wickard states that revision of the 16-unit essential for standard is being contemplated to insure that no skilled farm worker is taken from the farm.

More Machinery in Prospect

Increases in county quotas of many items of farm machinery and equipment are in prospect as a result of WPB action to allocate more materials to machinery manufacturers. The county farm rationing committee will be guided by information gathered in the current farm canvass to place these additional machines on farms where they are most needed and will contribute the most to 1943 production.

Tire Check-Up Deadline

Farm truck owners now have until February 28 to have truck tires inspected in compliance with ODT regulations.

Good News for Feeders

Two developments this week give Oregon farmers assurance of adequate supplies of feed grains and moderate prices to help meet 1943 livestock and poultry needs. First, commodity credit announced that its feed wheat sales would be continued on substantially the same basis as 1942, when about three million bushels of wheat were sold for feeding to livestock and poultry in the state. Second, OPA ceilings halted the upward spiral of corn prices.

New Pork Price Rules

In a move to assure full use of pork supplies by civilians, armed forces and lend-lease, OPA on January 19 replaced packer and wholesale sellers' ceiling prices with new uniform regulations. Prices to the consumer will remain unchanged, since retail ceilings are not affected.
