

This rigging seems naval to a G. I. infantryman. But what can a fellow do when he breaks a leg in a jump and then takes a load of shells from a mortar when he's down? Pvt. John F. Maxon, 22, Buffalo, N. Y., paratrooper, says you just take it, and thank your lucky stars you wind up in a comfortable bed back home. You thank those stars, too, for War Bonds that get you back into circulation.

Michael L. Susan, Aliquippa, Pa., PFC, was an outpost at Anzio Beach, Italy, when hit by a shell. It looks as though the 20-year-old Michael is out of the fighting for good, but he is still able to give strong sales talks for War Bonds.

Staff Sergeant Ira Vaughn took his dose and left the fight at St. Lo, France. The 23-year-old infantry sergeant from San Antonio, Texas, came out with a broken arm but stout heart. A sniper in a hedgerow saw him first. It would have been too bad for the sniper if things had been reversed. And it will be too bad for all the Nazis and Nips if people buy War Bonds the way Sergeant Vaughn says they should.

Home Waterproof Method Explained

A simple home treatment for waterproofing cotton gabardine and other firmly woven cotton materials is described by Miss Lucy Lane, extension specialist in clothing and textiles at O.S.C. The garment to be treated is first placed in luke warm soap-suds made with a good neutral soap. After it is thoroughly soaked in this, the garment is squeezed free of excess water and soap, then put in a solution made with two ounces of potash alum for each gallon of water. After the garment soaks in this thoroughly, it is squeezed out and hung to dry without rinsing, but always on a rope clothesline rather than a metal one.

Children's play clothes and jackets treated in this manner give added protection, although they must be treated after each washing.

Wax Stockings, Add to Wear

An old European practice for saving wear on heels and toes of stockings has been revived and recommended for use in this country by USDA research people, reports Miss Lucy Lane, extension specialist in clothing and textiles at O.S.C.

The practice consists of rubbing paraffin or candle wax on heels and toes of hose. In actual tests on wearing machines this treatment kept hose free from holes four times as long as those untreated.

The wax is merely rubbed over the heel and toe of the stocking before each wearing. Even if waxing is not repeated until after several launderings, enough remains to add considerably to the durability, the experiment demonstrated. The wax can be used on cotton, wool or rayon hose. If only a thin film of wax is applied, it will not interfere with the proper laundering of the stockings, nor will it change their appearance, Miss Lane reports.

SYNTHETICS CHEAPER

Synthetic rubber can be produced "on a peacetime basis" at 10.7 cents per pound—as against the prewar price of 22 cents for natural rubber, Goodrich predicts.

1500 POSTS ACTIVE

There are at present 1500 military posts, camps and installations or their components functioning throughout the nation.
